We'll bet Russell Hawkins a new hat it will not cost the Whitney Co., $100,000 a mile for the logging road it is building up the Killebis river, and nobody has a democratic cost plus contract.

Murder will out. This is what General Disque is reported saying: "I am not upholding the aircraft board nor the democratic party; there is enough rottenness in both of them to make us want to change for something that can run the country."

That is all very true and generally admitted. But it will not restore the lives of the boys who were killed in France because the American army was often unprotected for want of airplanes. It was criminal negligence on the part of the aircraft board and the democratic administration.

Reference was made to the 150 officers who were employed in the Yeon building in Portland. Yes, some of these officers were used for a publicity bureau, sending out all kinds of dope landing Colonel Disque and so much of this dope was printed in the Portland newspapers that it gave one a tired, disgusting feeling to think how some of these officers were employed at home to win the war. The whole plan of the publicity bureau of the spruce division was to laud and praise General Disque, and the Portland newspapers were made pliant tools in the propaganda.

One cannot overlook the fact that in August, 1914, when the blood thirsty Huns invaded Belgium, and started the war so that Germany could dominate the world with her military power, President Wilson was not very strong for democracy or a league of nations, for when the German army was committing all manner of horrible atrocities in Belgium, the President advised the people of the United States to be neutral, for the war in Europe was none of our business and the United States should not get mixed up in it. Then was the time for the President to have taken a stand for democracy when he saw a great powerful nation overrun and tramp upon a small country like Belgium. He raised no word of protest to Germany, but closed his eyes to the horrible crimes that were committed in Belgium. It is not to be wondered at, since the president changed his attitude with every changing wind and appealed to the people for re-election that he kept us out of war, his advocacy of the league of nations covenant is not taken hold of with the enthusiasm that he expected.

So Senator Chamberlain, as well as ex-Governor West, played politics in having Russell Hawkins and George S. Long removed from official positions in the spruce production, which will act as a boomerang whenever they seek public positions again. It was generally admitted amongst mill men and loggers that they could have supplied the government with more spruce lumber than was required had the government organized them. There was no question as to the ability of the mill men and loggers of the northwest being able to do this, and they would have done so had not the spruce division been organized with nearly 30,000 men, who knew little or nothing about milling and logging. When Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Long were removed, by the poke nose and interfering methods of Os West and Senator Chamberlain, it looked as though the government did not want experienced men to direct the spruce production, but preferred politicians who knew nothing about the mill and logging business. It is not surprising that the people's money was wasted, the cost plus system adopted so that the United States, England and France could be "bled white".

Every now and then we hear Democrats denounce the United States Senators because they will not do as President Wilson dictates. If it was a democratic senate, why, of course, the president could lead the democratic senators by the nose and make them do exactly what he wanted. But, fortunately, there is a majority of Republican senators and they do not propose to be led in that way. But why keep denouncing United States senators. The senate is the constitutional body where treaties are to be referred, discussed and agreed to, and we take it that it is perfectly right and proper for the Senate that they thoroughly discuss the treaty of peace and the league of nations covenant. President Wilson has taken the untenable position that the treaty and the covenant are perfect and need no change. This is where he is mistaken. The president was positive in his assertions that the United States should not enter the world war, but he changed his mind, as he did in a good many other things he said. We will quote a few:

January 8, 1915—"Do you not think that the world will some day turn to America and say: 'You were right and we were wrong. You kept your heads and we lost ours.'"

February 1, 1916—"America is called on to sit in a kind of moral judgment on the process of the war."
May 17, 1916—"Since the rest of the world is mad, why should we not refuse to have anything to do with the rest of the world in the ordinary channels of action?"

December 8, 1914—"More than this, proposed at this time, permit me to say, would mean merely that we had been thrown off our balance by a war with which we have nothing to do, whose causes cannot touch us."
September 2, 1916—"We have been neutral not only because it was the fixed and traditional policy of the United States to stand aloof from the policies of Europe, but because we had no part either of action or of policy in the influences which brought on the present war."

August 18, 1914—"The United States must be neutral in fact as well as in name during these days which are to try men's souls. We must be impartial in thought as well as upon every transaction which might be construed as a preference to one party in the struggle before another."

January 27, 1915—"Wilson's cablegram to his Imperial Majesty, Emperor William: 'In behalf of the government and the people of the United States I have the pleasure to extend to your Majesty cordial felicitations on this anniversary of your birth, as well as my own good wishes for your welfare.'"

May 10, 1915—"There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so rich that it need not convince others by force."

May 13, 1915—"Recalling the humane and enlightened attitude heretofore assumed by the Imperial German Government in matters of international right."

May 13, 1915—"... having learned to recognize the German views and the German influence in the field of international obligations as always engaged on the side of justice and humanity."
February 3, 1916—"We believe that we can show our friendship for the world and devotion for the purposes of humanity better by keeping out of this trouble than by getting into it."

October 10, 1915—"America ought to devote itself only to the things that America believes in, and believing that America stands apart in its ideals, it ought not to allow itself to be drawn, so far as its heart is concerned into somebody's quarrel."
January 22, 1917—"It must be a peace without victory."
Victory would mean peace forced on the loser; a victor's terms imposed upon the vanquished. It would be accepted in humiliation, under duress, at an intolerable sacrifice, and would leave a sting, a resentment, a bitter memory upon which the terms of peace would rest, not permanently, but only as upon a quicksand."

January 31, 1917—"The war was brought on by rulers, not by people and I thank God that there is no man in America that has the authority to bring on war without the consent of the people."
February 27, 1916—"America ought to keep out of this war. She ought to keep out of this war at the sacrifice of everything except the single thing upon which her character and history are founded, her sense of justice and humanity."

October 1, 1916—"Some of the supporters of the Republican party, a very great body of the supporters of that party, outspokenly declare that they want war, so the certain prospect of the success of the Republican party is that we shall be drawn in one form or another, into the embroilment of the European War."

October 1, 1916—"Some of the supporters of the Republican party, a very great body of the supporters of that party, outspokenly declare that they want war, so the certain prospect of the success of the Republican party is that we shall be drawn in one form or another, into the embroilment of the European War."

May 12, 1915—"Recalling the humane and enlightened attitude heretofore assumed by the Imperial German Government in matters of international right; having learned to recognize the German views and the German influence in the field of international obligations as always engaged on the side of justice and humanity."
May 27, 1916—"With its (the War's) causes and objects we have no concern."
May 27, 1918—"Politics is adjourned. The election will go to those who think least of it, to those who go to their constituencies without explanations or excuses, with a plain record of duty faithfully and disinterestedly performed."

School Opens With 400 on Roll.

The local schools opened Monday, September 15, with an enrollment slightly over four hundred.

More than 40 beginners enrolled with Mrs. Burge. The high school attendance for the year promises to be larger than usual.

The afternoon session of high school will begin at 1 p.m. to allow time for the physical education required by the new state law without dismissing the students later in the afternoon than before, thus inconveniencing many of those who come into high school from outside districts.

For the opening days last year's books will be used in certain subjects, as the local dealers have not yet received all the new books from the state distributor, the J. K. Gill Co., of Portland, who state their supply has not yet been received from the manufacturers. The dealers hope to have all the books in the next week.

Mr. J. A. Churchill, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has requested the local school authorities to announce that hereafter if high school students wish to receive credit for music taken outside of the high school, the work must be taken under an instructor who has received a certificate to teach music from the State Department of Education, and who is following the new course of study in music for pupils studying music outside of school. Teachers of music who are interested in securing a certificate may secure application blanks of the local city superintendent.

Among the graduates of the local high school who are planning to enter college this fall are the following: Joseph Schnal and Elaine Todd, who are planning on entering the University of Washington; James May, W. G. Wilmut, Fay Harris, Jayme La Follett and Thomas Coats, University of Oregon; Hazel Lamar, Oregon Agricultural College; Verne Bain, Willamette University.

Charming Story by Gifted Writer.

Maria Thompson Davies, author of "The Golden Bird" a delightful story which has been pictured by Paramount under the name of "Little Miss Hoover", for Marguerite Clark, is a brilliant writer whose novels and stories have won her fame and fortune. Miss Davies has written several stories which have been adopted for the screen, but it is said that "Little Miss Hoover" outranks her previous efforts in point of dramatic interest and excellence.

Nancy Craddock the heroine of "Little Miss Hoover", is a society girl of Washington, D. C., who decides to do her bit for her country by raising chickens. She becomes a farmer and in the course of her operations meets a charming gentleman farmer whom she loves. Of course there is a rival to whom Nancy has given her promise to wed, but he drops out of the game in an unusual manner and all ends happily. The various situations of the picture which will be shown at the Gem Theatre, Wednesday, September 24, are described as being exceptionally interesting.

Resolution of Condolence.

Castle hall of Marathon Lodge No. 89, K. of P., Tillamook, Sept. 12, 1919
We your committee appointed to draft resolutions of condolence to Brothers Erwin and Leslie Harrison, who have been called to mourn the loss of a fond and loving sister, beg to submit the following:

Whereas the Supreme Ruler of the Universe in His wisdom and mercy has seen fit to receive from this world of pain and sorrow, to that happy home above, the beloved sister of our brothers, and in her death we are once more reminded that our lives are of but short duration, and are called to pause a moment in the busy whirl of life and bow our heads in humble submission to the will of Him who rules the destinies of all.

Resolved further that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and one to the newspapers for publication.
