Men who know tobacco, chew the best without its costing them any more. They take a little chew and it's amazing how the good taste stays in a rich, high grade chewing tobacco. For lasting tobacco satisfaction, there's nothing like a small chew of that rich-tasting tobacco.

COAXING YOU TO SMILE.

Where Jackasses Belong.
A funny one occurred at Fifth and Spring the other evening. A little old lady was waiting patiently for a Sixth Street car, but it chanced to be just at that hour when many were going out of service.

When the first one came along, she stepped into the street but the car growled past without even slowing down. The next one did, however, but the conductor leaning over the rail, bawled out, "going to the barn."

Twice this happened and the little old lady, who had first had accepted the "going to the barn" with resignation, had reached the boiling point when for a fourth time a car stopped and the conductor yanking the bell, chortled "going to the barn."

"Well, go to the barn, yuh darn jackass, it's just where you belong," yelled the indignant one, brandishing her umbrella.

Emptier than his Title.

It is told that one day shortly before the armistice, a tired, hungry looking young man turned up at the British camp and asked if he might have something to eat.

"Certainly," said the officer, noting the khaki suit. "But may I ask who you are?"

A weary smile stole over the young fellow's face as he replied, "Oh, I'm the Prince of Wales—but for heaven's sake forget it."

Conflicting Attitudes

"You want to manage the business?" asked the employer.

"I do," answered the employe.

"Well, I don't understand it at all. A little while ago you were demanding eight hours' work and the assurance of good compensation. Now you want to shoulder responsibilities that will keep you worried at least eighteen hours a day, besides taking a chance on going broke if the markets happen to slip the wrong way."

A Polite Burglar.

Miss Gortyodd awoke in the middle of the night to find a burglar ransacking her effects. Miss Fortyodd did not scream, for she prided herself, among other things, upon her courage.

Pointing to the door with a dramatic gesture, she exclaimed:

"Leave me at once!"

The burglar politely retreated a step and said:

"I had no intention of taking you."

A Born Optimist.

"That fellow Jones is a born optimist—most hopeful fellow I ever knew."

"Yes?"

"He certainly is. No matter how hard a job we've got, no odds how difficult, you can be worrying yourself to death, but he won't; no sir! He'll just smile and tell you to keep on dear heart; behind the sun the clouds are darkest; never say die; until you could almost waste a brick on him."

Doctor's Vanity Cured.

"I didn't make as many promises to my patients as I did when I first began practicing," said a physician in answer to a question propounded by a patient. "I was cured of my confidence in making predictions early in my practice. 'Take this medicine,' I said to a woman patient, 'and you'll be all right tomorrow.'"

"The next day I called and asked her how she felt. 'Just fine,' she answered. 'I told you you would if you took the medicine I prescribed,' I answered, with the vanity of youth.

"Yes, but I didn't take the medicine at all," the woman replied.

And Stopped Talking?

"Well," said the far west mayor to the English tourist, "I dunno how you manage these affairs in your country, but over here, when some of our boys got tied up in that bankrupt telephone company I was tellin' yuh about, they become mighty crusty."

"Oh!"

"Yes, they didn't like the way the receiver was handlin' the business nohow."

"Indeed!" commented the earnest listener. "Then may I ask what they did?"

"Sartinly. They just hung up the receiver."

Sorry, Just the Same.

They were newly married and she was much too young to understand that a man takes but little interest in shopping expeditions. She had left his side to look at a window in which were exhibited some new spring fashions.

When she returned she took the arm, which seemed to be half grudgingly proffered, and sobbed:

"You—you don't even lo—look at anything I want to—to see; you do—don't care how I am dressed. You no longer lo—love me. You haven't even ker-kissed me for a whole day, and you!"

"I am extremely sorry, madam, but that is my misfortune, not my fault," said the gentleman looking pathetically down into her face.

She looked at him and gasped—she had taken the arm of the wrong man.

What you pay out your good money for is cigarette satisfaction—and, my, how you do get it in every puff of Camels!

EXPERTLY blended choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos in Camel cigarettes eliminate bite and free them from any unpleasant cigarettey aftertaste or unpleasant cigarettey odor.

Camels win instant and permanent success with smokers because the blend brings out to the limit the refreshing flavor and delightful mellow-mildness of the tobaccos yet retaining the desirable "body." Camels are simply a revelation! You may smoke them without tiring your taste!

For your own satisfaction you must compare Camels with any cigarette in the world at any price. Then, you'll best realize their superior quality and the rare enjoyment they provide.

Scraps of Paper.

The Senate is putting the "shant" in Shantung.

H. Bryan, of St. Paul, concocts this: "Covert covenants covertly connived at."

Burleson will stick, it is announced. Sure, that's why the "burr" is in Burleson.

Well, the American mother certainly didn't raise her boy to be a policeman in Silesia or Hedjaz.

Emerson said: "None shall rule but the humble, and none but toil shall have." He ought to see us now.

The next tariff law ought to put a prohibitive tariff on alien covenants surreptitiously connived at.

No treaty of peace provides no "annexations." The league phraseologists have invented a new name for it.

Glittering phrases will not maintain the prosperity of the American people; it has been tried before and it has never worked.

If government railroading keeps on keeping on, and the employes were to divide the losses, they soon wouldn't have any wage left.

Carranza declares he has no use for the Monroe Doctrine, but he isn't the only executive on the hemisphere who hasn't much respect for it.

The American people have to pay $35,000 for damages done the Hotel Crillon by the free boarders we entertained there. Colonel House's first name must be Rough.

Of course after being permitted to rob and kill American citizens at will for several years, it is a little difficult for Gen. Carranza to grasp the idea that anybody has a right to object.

You might suppose this man Plumb who invented the Plumb plan, was a working man, but he isn't; he's a lawyer, who never having been an employer or an employe naturally knows all about the matter.

Joseph I. C. Clark writes in the New York Times that if the United States doesn't join the league of nations the rest of the world may combine and wage war on us. In other words we had better surrender before being whipped.

One of the items in a Presidential expense account is thirteen thousand dollars for entertaining Sir Eric Geddes and party. It was the Democratic national platform of 1912, we believe, which demanded "a return to that simplicity and economy befitting a democratic government."

The credulous people who are ready to swallow that "he keeps us out of war" stuff every time it is handed out reminds one of the hen who spent the whole Fourth of July picking up firecrackers on the continued supposition that they were worms, despite the fact that every explosion nearly tore her fool head off.

Who will share the losses of industry when the profits are divided? And if profits are to be guaranteed who's going to be the goat of that arrangement? It all gets back to the plan for trimming the ultimate and unfortunate consumer.

Big business has a right to favor the league of nations covenant as it stands, but it is little business for big business to be willing to think more of the commercial advantages it expects to derive from internationalization than it does of the rights and interests of the American people.

President Wilson says that the adoption of the league of nations will make it certain that our boys will never have to cross the seas again. This accounts for his having signed a treaty which provides that in case France is attacked by Germany we shall send military assistance.

"Dissatisfaction at plans of Senate leadership keen," means the Washington Star, an administration organ. Did the people of this country deny President Wilson's appeal for a Democratic Senate and send men rather than rubber stamps to control that body merely for the purpose of producing keen satisfaction at the White House?

President Wilson says it's time for the opponents of the treaty "to put up or shut up." That has been substantially the message of the present national administration to the American people for a long time; "Put up and shut up." But the people are beginning to believe that those who have to put up should be permitted to talk up occasionally.
