Twenty Sons In The War.

Details have just been received from Lille of what is considered with out question the greatest "contribution" made to the war by any one single family.

The head of this family was M. Vanhoe, a farmer living at Reminghe near Ypres. At the outbreak of the war he was the father of 36 living children, 14 girls and 22 boys. Of these 29 13 were killed and three were permanently discharged as the result of wounds unfitting them for further service. Still another was wounded four times during the war.

In 1917 the widow of one of the sons, Alfred, also was killed during the bombardment of Dunkerque. She left five orphans. But even before this, M. Vanhee had already given up his life to the Germans. On October of 1914 he had gone to Lille with one of his daughters to celebrate the birthday of "relative. On his return home the two were caught by a German patrol and both shot.

COAXING YOU TO SMILE

Plenty of Room.

A tired soldier, loaded with equipment, climbed into a crowded London bus. No one offered him a seat. Finally he took from his haversack a small bomb.

"This is one of the things we use out there, you know," he remarked to two or three passengers. "See this pin here? When I pull it out like this it should explode a few seconds later. If I put it back again the thing is harmless." Then, beginning to search frantically; Where on earth did I put that pin?"

Within one minute the bus was empty. Then, putting the bomb back in his haversack, Tommy stretched himself full length on the cushioned seat.

That's What We Thought.

First soldier—"What must a man be to be buried with military honor?"
Second Soldier—"He must be of the grade of lieutenant or higher."
First Ditto—"Then I lost my bet."
Second Ditto—"What did you bet?"
First Ditto—"I bet he must be dead."

A Variant.

She—"I'd like to ask you a question."
He—"Ask it, dear."
She—"Am I the only girl whose money you ever loved?"

No Wonder.

How is your baby brother? asked little Tommy, of a playmate.
"One year old," replied Johnny.
"Ah!" exclaimed Tommy. "I've got a dog a year old and he can walk twice as well as your brother."
"Well, so he ought to," replied Johnny; "he's got twice as many legs."

No Such Animal.

In the counting house of a city office, usually closed at 6 o'clock, the office boy had been known, like others of that fraternity, to occasionally forget to do those things which he ought to have done, and the manager had at last to impress upon him the advisability of making a note of anything important on a memorandum form and keeping it in a conspicuous place as a reminder.

The other day a piece of paper was noticed pinned to the wall in front of the lad's desk, and upon examination it was found to bear the following:

Memorandum, Leave at 6."

Experience Adequate.

Anxious to travel for a big English firm in the ham line, an Irishman obtained an interview with the proprietor. "What experience have you had?" the Irishman was asked. "Eighteen months," was the answer. "Eighteen months!" scornfully repeated the proprietor. "What could you learn about bacon in that time? Why, I've been studying for forty years, and don't know half enough about it yet." "Bedad," exclaimed Pat, with a confident smile, "if I'd been studying it for forty years I'd know how to make a pig." He got the job.

Waiter Sticks to Facts

The war may be over, but it hasn't been over long enough for some people to regain their former manners. That's how it was with Jenks, the waiter.

"Look here," said the irate diner, "there's a fly in the butter!"
"That isn't a fly," said Jenks; "it is a moth. And that isn't butter; it's margarine. Otherwise your assertion is correct."

Senator Sherman, of Illinois, who has the awful habit of saying what he thinks and thinking what he says, makes reference to a concern "cavern of counterfeit moralities and cockloft of scholastic gabble." One guess as to whom he is thinking about.

Concerning Mr. Walsh.

Friends of the administration are now denouncing Frank P. Walsh for his activities, said to be embarrassing to the President, in connection with the Irish question. If Mr. Walsh, as these court journals now say, is a "cheap demagogue" and "blatant agitator" who has been guilty of "glaring offensive indiscretion," what must be said of the course of President Wilson in appointing such a man to the responsible position of head of the War Labor board and making him one of his closest confidential advisers for many months? President Wilson is entirely responsible for the present agitation over the Irish question by having proclaimed his doctrine of self-determination of races and peoples. It is the doctrine which has aroused unrest not only in Ireland but in Egypt, India and other countries having separate racial but not political identity. The worst that can be said about Mr. Walsh is that he is practicing the "fourteen points" which President Wilson preaches but conveniently forgets when they do not serve his purposes.

Miss Goldman Complains.

Students of democratic cooperation and national welfare ought to be interested in the bitter complaint of Emma Goldman against the dining room in the Missouri penitentiary.

Miss Goldman calls upon heaven, or its anarchistic equivalent, to witness that food in the prison is neither abundant nor palatable and the service is nothing to brag about.

Miss Goldman ought to be reminded that the essential service in her case was exceptionally well rendered. The government obliged itself to deliver to her a certain penalty in exchange for a premeditated breach of conduct; and she has it.

She complains that the government was inconsiderate of her. But was she ever considerate of the government? She thinks it is a burning shame that her digestion was endangered; but did she think it a burning shame to imperil the lives of American soldiers by stirring up se-
