Death of C. E. Reynolds.

Death removed a well known character, Charles Elmer Reynolds, who was more or less conspicuous in the city since the year 1888, when he first came to Tillamook, and being a member of the G. A. R., he was first and foremost in all patriotic gatherings where the G. A. R. and W. R. C. participated. Although the son of a Methodist minister he did not follow his father in that respect, for Charles was an agnostic. During his residence here the deceased had engaged in agriculture, carpentering, and the furniture and undertaking business. He was a most active member of the G. A. R. and was one of the committee of management when the state encampment was held in this city a few years ago. He showed quite a bit of originality when preparing plug uglies and other laughable stunts for Fourth of July and other celebrations. The deceased was a Republican in politics, and his Americanism was 100 per cent. He was a member of the I. O. O. F.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, the Oddfellows having charge of the services, and members of the G. A. R. acted as pall bearers. The interment was in the Oddfellows' cemetery.

Mr. Reynolds was indebted for his education to his own efforts for experience has been the stern teacher from whom he had received the most impressive lessons in life. His youth was spent on a farm in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., where he was born February 11, 1840, and where his father, Samuel Reynolds, combined farming and local preaching in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Previously Mr. Reynolds had lived in both Erie and Livingston counties in his native state, but his last days were spent in Cattaraugus county, where he died at the age of sixty-five. His wife, formerly Eliza Hoyt, was also born in New York state, and lived to be fifty-eight years old. Of the eleven children, seven of whom were sons, Charles Elmer was the seventh. The children of Samuel Reynolds were obliged to work hard in their youth, for the family was a large one, and local preaching in those days was not a remunerative occupation. There were too many sons at home to eke out a livelihood on a farm of modern size, and Charles Elmer decided to start out for himself directly after the death of his father. He was seventeen at the time, a strong willing lad, full of grit and determination and already convinced that reliability and integrity were to be his chief stock in trade. He farmed and logged, with the result that he laid by a little money, and he was hard at work when the country was precipitated into the throes of the Civil War.

Enlisting in Company H, Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, he served four years and participated in forty-seven battles, his regiment being connected with the Army of the Potomac. At the battle of Fredericksburg, where he was wounded in the leg and neck, and was in a hospital for a short time, when he again joined his command, and was with Grant in the Wilderness and before Richmond and Petersburg. His regiment being on the front line at Appomattox when Lee surrendered. April 9, 1865. Mr. Reynolds went back to Harrisburg and was discharged July 15, 1865, having served in the army four years two months and twenty-three days. Although so many years have passed, this veteran vividly recalled all the circumstances connected with the great contests, several of which will go down in history as among the greatest in the world. Some chance bugler sounding taps, some reminder of friend with whom he tented or fought or marched, and Mr. Reynolds had at his tongue's end a fund of interesting reminiscences to which it was a delight to listen. After the war Mr. Reynolds located in Wisconsin, living first in St. Croix and afterwards in Pierce county. He was quite successful as a farmer and carpenter, and became interested in Republican politics, being elected to several local offices. He served both as school director and road supervisor several terms.

In 1882 Mr. Reynolds returned east visiting New York and Pennsylvania, and the returned to his former home in Wisconsin. After locating in Tillamook in 1888, he took up one hundred and sixty acres of land for farming, and one hundred and eighty acres of timber land, four years later taking up a homestead near the town of Tillamook. While managing his property he worked also at his trade, and perceived a scarcity of certain enterprises of which his fellow-townsmen had not been quick to avail themselves, he selected that of furniture and undertaking, and started business in 1902. The following year he purchased a furniture store.

Twice married, the first wife of Mr. Reynolds was formerly Clara Bennett, who was born in Pierce county, Wis., and died in the state of Pennsylvania. Of this union there were three children, of whom Frederick and Minerva are deceased and Myrtle is the wife of H. C. Boland, of Pennsylvania. Since coming to Tillamook Mr. Reynolds married Lizzie Clark, who was born in Illinois, and afterward removed to Wisconsin with her parents, Miss Clark and Mr. Reynolds were friends in Wisconsin, and she joined him here in June 1889, the marriage taking place the following month.

Wonder what Senator James A. Reed thinks of the Dixie brand of Democracy he used to be associated with now that he has seen it on tap in Oklahoma?

Wallace Reid Seen in Unusually Powerful Characterization.
When a slacker wakes up to a realization of his true position in society, then he will also make up his mind that it is "never too late to repent." This happen in "Alias, Mike Moran," Wallace Reid's new Paramount picture which will be displayed at the Gem Theatre next Monday.

Mr. Reid as Larry Young, is a slacker, who when he is drafted bribes a former convict who really wants to fight for his country, to assume his name, with the result that the convict goes to the front and is killed after making the name of Young famous for bravery.
Larry loves a girl whom he believes is wealthy, and who fails to undeceive him, fearing that when he learns that she is a lady's companion, his love will vanish. The death of the convict awakens Larry's soul and he enlists and performs such deeds of valor under the convict's name of Moran, as the latter did not dream of doing. When he is carried desparately wounded to a hospital, he meets his sweetheart and after mutual confession, the road to happiness for both is opened.

A Request.
A request of the people of Oregon by the citizens of Grand Ronde, Yamhill County, Oregon.
Be it herewith known that Joseph Kaster, his wife Emma Kaster and her two daughters 14 and 16 years, have lost by fire all their worldly property, consisting of one team and harness, 6 cows and 3 hogs, all their hay and feed. Mr. Kaster is over 60 years old, has always been an honest, hard working man. Now, therefore, we come to you to contribute what you can, so we can buy for this poor family a team and cows. Mr. Kaster has no land but lives on a rented place. Please forward your contributions to Peterson & Sons, Grand Ronde, Oregon.
A. R. Ford, Chas. H. Bates, L. F. Bates, Abbie G. Kelly and M. Peterson, Committee.
