

What the Editors Say

Turn a reckless fool loose in the woods with a gun and the inevitable happens, as is proven by the daily reports of people being shot by mistake for a deer.—Independent.

Rev. Clarence True Wilson told a Cincinnati audience that "cigarettes had ruined the health of 2,000,000 soldiers" and that the Democratic administration now in the White House "had sold out to the tobacco trust." One statement is about as true as the other. What C. True Wilson needs for the good of his country is a dose of physic and a muzzle.—Gazette Times.

Judging from some of the Oregon publications Senator Chamberlain cannot be defeated. There ain't no such animal. It is when a man gets the idea that the people just must have him that the people turn him down. To our way of thinking Mr. Chamberlain is due to receive a trimming. And if he is to be trimmed it should be some man who will be a credit to the state.—Observer.

With fruit going to waste because there is no sugar with which to can it, it is evident that somebody blundered. That somebody is connected with the government. There would be no shortage of sugar if the supply had been cared for and no shipments made to Europe. It's a fine howdoo to ship sugar to the old world and then go without ourselves.—Observer.

Foreign born residents of Chicago are leaving at the rate of 100 a day, taking with them an average of $100,000, according to the deputy collector of the internal revenue department, whose duty it is to see that all outgoing foreigners have paid their income tax. The principal nationalities leaving the United States are Roumanians, Greeks, Italians, Germans, Swedes and Irish.—Telephone Register.

Well, well, there is one Chicago minister who not only is not bamboozled by the political report of the federal trade commission on the packers, but who is willing to stand up in his pulpit and say so. The Rev. Johnston Myers of the Immanuel Baptist Church at Chicago paid his respects to the outfit that is trying to force socialism on the country when they can take advantage of the high cost of living as leverage. Rev. Myers not only confounds the commission but he says that the packers are entitled to praise instead of blame for their part in winning the war. Gazette Times.

The possibilities of publishing a magazine or newspaper without the use of compositors or typesetting machines became apparent when a copy of the Literary Digest of Oct. 17th was received. This entire magazine comprising 80 pages, was printed from plates by photographing the original typewritten copy, made the same as halftones are made from photographs. This new form of the Digest was the result of an experiment caused by the necessity of getting out the magazine when the mechanical force was tied up by the printers' "vacation", a polite name for a strike of printers in New York City. The same plan has been tried by a California publication with success. Should this plan become universal type setting machines may become obsolete and the time honored work of the compositor will fade into memory. It is a radical departure and may revolutionize the whole printing system.—Sheridan Sun.

The Truth is Coming Out Peaceful.

Brigadier General William Mitchell, chief of the air service with the American expeditionary forces, told the house investigating committee Wednesday that the De Havilland four, the first type of airplanes built in the United States for fighting, were faulty machines, with defects of design which led to fatalities among pilots. The Liberty motor, he said, was made by men who "knew nothing about the conditions of war" though the motor itself was "a good first attempt."

When the war department entered upon its experimenting program, The Spokesman-Review protested that it was a grievous mistake. The urgent need was speedy construction of airplanes in large numbers. Then why this folly, it asked, of trying to evolve new types and new engines 3000 miles from the battlefield? Under the fierce stress of war our allies had learned the last word in airplane construction. Then why not instantly adopt their latest types and start building aircraft in large numbers?

Through the war department's stupendous blunder we lost precious time and we wasted hundreds of millions of dollars. The administration would not listen to reason and was arrogantly resentful of advice or criticism.

When Senator Chamberlain then chairman of the military affairs committee of the senate and a democrat, had the courage and patriotism to turn the searchlight on the war department's blunders the president cried out sharply that "nothing helpful or likely to speed or facilitate the war tasks of the government has come out of such criticism and investigation."

Four months later Secretary Baker asserted before the house committee that criticism of the war department aircraft program was inspired by pro-German influences!

Now little by little the truth is coming out peacefully—admitted by officers like General Mitchell, who can speak authoritatively and from the vantage point of personal knowledge of conditions at the front—and it makes a sorry and staggering revelation. The American people are beginning to realize that the half has not been told concerning the blunders the extravagance, the woful wastage of the war department.—Spokesman Review.

Who Appointed Them?

No notice has been taken by the federal trade commission of the extraordinary charges of Senator Watson that its investigation of the packers in the hands of bolshevists, anarchists and socialists, except to say that the senator is acting for big business and to revive expedited charges against him. We say "exploded" because a congressional committee once went into them and declared them unfounded. But the question of Senator Watson's wickedness is not the issue. It is the truth of what he says. The country is suspicious of the meat packers and their methods, but it has become even more suspicious of the federal trade commission and its methods.

Senator Watson charged bluntly and specifically that the Chicago office of the federal trade commission is a "center of sedition and anarchy". He said that various investigators and other employees were pro-German, anti-ally, admirers of Lenin and Trotsky, advocates of a soviet form of government, participants in red demonstrations and parades and disseminators of socialist propaganda.

Senator Watson named names and cited facts. He named Stuart Chase, who with one Samuel Tator had general charge of the investigation as president of a socialist club, an associate of Victor Berger, Irwin St. John Tucker and other extreme socialists and made his office the rendezvous of men "devoted to the destruction of property and the overthrow of government." Among Chase's other questionable activities was a magazine article assailing the United States government for not recognizing the Russian Reds. Tator was of the same kind, an avowed sympathizer with sovietism, anti-ally during the war and a propagandist for the confiscation of big business. Under this precious pair were many others of like kidney, all of them committed with grave responsibilities by the United States government, and none of them, so far as Senator Watson's investigation discloses, fit for an impartial investigation of big business or little business or anything else.

The senate will look into Senator Watson's charges. It should not rest, if it verifies them, or any part of them, until it reveals to the nation the influence that procured the selection of such men for such service for the public.—Oregonian.

Only Thirty Hours a Week.

With prices still advancing and production staying way behind the demand, some working people are talking of the six hour day and the five-day week.

It has not been very long since we heard so much talk about the degeneration of the idle rich. It is all right to talk of the working man being entitled to plenty of time for recreation and the development of his mind, but there is little assurance that the short working day and the short working week would bring about any such result.

With but 30 working hours in a week and two days of a week with nothing to do but satisfy a craving for amusement and entertainment, it does not take a very vivid imagination to see immortality rampant everywhere, the jails full of those who have too much time in which to get into mischief and the race degenerating because of a lack of bodily and mental exercise to keep it in condition.

Too much work may not be a good thing but too much time for loafing and getting into devilry is far worse.

Six working days a week of eight hours a day is not too much for any person, leaving eight hours for sleep and eight hours for recreation. A person who wishes more idle time than that must be getting downright lazy. Certainly he would not be a success in the country newspaper business and not much of a success in any other kind of business.—Sentinel.
