William Penn, the Founder of Pennsylvania, Died at the Age of Seventy-Four

In 1718, on July 30, William Penn, the Quaker founder of Pennsylvania, died at the age of seventy-four. Penn received the charter for the territory from Charles II in 1680. He was granted almost sovereign powers of government. Immediately upon taking office he pledged to the people freedom to form their own laws and protection and security against oppression. During his long governorship his pledges were amply sustained. He organized a free society of traders and under his wise and beneficent control the prosperity of the colony grew rapidly. Penn's treaties with the Indians secured his settlement from the invasion that so retarded the development of the other colonies and enormously facilitated the increase of its population.

JUST TO SMILE

Knew Him.
Jones—Could you lend me $10 until tomorrow?
Smith—Not very well, I shall be needing it by week after next.

A Silent Partner.
Mrs. Heck—Does your husband talk politics around the house?
Mrs. Peck—My husband never talks anything around the house.

Easily Pleased.
"I do not know, sir, that I want the love you give me."
"All right; I'll be just as well satisfied if you return it."

"The Editor Regrets."
"A magazine editor must lead a somewhat gloomy life," declared the poet as he opened some returned manuscript.
"Why so?"
"All he seems to do is to pass out regrets."

Her Reply.
"Dear," he cried, resolved to change her. "There are words I burn to say!"
Then she made this cryptic answer.
"All right, Charlie, blaze away."

Selling the Girl.
"So you want my daughter, eh?"
"I do, sir."
"Have you any money?"
"A little. How high do you quote her?"

He Owns Up.
"Where are you going, son?"
"Going to call on a party down the street."
"I don't like the use of that word party. If you are going to see a gentleman, say so."
"Well, dad, I'm going to see a girl."

Mer Reply.
"Dear," he cried, resolved to change her. "There are words I burn to say!"

Perversions of English Speech Are Numerous—Some of the Examples

John Rivers points out how many "perversions" of English are used in common speech.

Thus "exterminate," which properly means "to drive out," or "banish," is now used as an equivalent of "exterminate" in the sense of "to destroy utterly." "Trivial," which really means "trite" or "hackneyed," as when Bacon writes, "These conceits which are now trivial were then new," has been assimilated in sense to "trifling." "Restless," which should mean "given to resting" or "stopping," has from its resemblance to "restless" acquired that word's meaning. In like manner the phrase "to demean oneself," a translation of the old French se demener, is now generally used in the sense of "to degrade oneself;" and the word "defile" from the French defiler, "to march in line," has received the meaning of the Anglo-Saxon "befile, to make foul." "Prejudicial" has come to be co-extensive with "harmful;" "unique" and "singular" with "remarkable."

A careful writer will not say that the heat is "phenomenal" unless he means that it is not real. He will not use the word "pessimistic" and "optimistic" as equivalents of "despondent" and "hopeful" respectively. Nor will he speak of an "egregious fool" unless he means a "distinguished buffoon." It would also be a distinct gain to the language if we could agree to rescue the word "impertinent" from the results of its unfortunate entanglement in the popular mind with the word "impudent," and restore it to its precise meaning as the opposite of "pertinent."—World's Work.

Spears Are Chief Weapons Used in the Capturing of Bears by Indian Hunters

Among the sports of India is the capturing of bears, and to this end curious means are sometimes devised. For example, four or five sturdy men are armed, two with long spears cross-barred on the handles close to the sharp two-edged blade, and two or three with ten-foot bamboos, of which the ends are smeared with bird-lime. These hunters sally forth with dogs before dawn. They pass along the base of the hills with the fresh morning wind blowing up the plains below. Should the hunter be lucky it is not long before the dogs find the bear. The dogs are slipped and disappear in the semi-darkness. Soon their roaring and growling indicate that they have found the game. The hunters run up to the spot where the bear is fighting with the dogs. The men with the limed poles poke the bear in the ribs and adroitly twist the ends in its long hair, thus holding it fast on each flank. The spearmen complete the operation by repeating spear thrusts.

Soup should be seen, not heard.

Good Fats.
A most delectable soup which may be prepared and served in short order is one using a can of pea soup put up by any good firm. Mix with a can of condensed milk, season, heat and serve.

Fried Oysters (Irwin).
Use a pint of crab meat to a dozen oysters. Extract the liquor from the meat and chop very fine. Add the same quantity of bread crumbs which have been freshly grated. When these two ingredients are well mixed add seasoning, roll the oysters in this mixture, dip in egg, then in crumbs and saute in butter in a very hot pan.

Peach Sherbet.
Boil one quart of water and two cupsful of sugar together, then add a quart of peach juice and pulp. Add the juice of one lemon and the well-beaten whites of two eggs. Freeze as usual.

Almond Delight Pie.
Make a rich pastry and line a pie tin. Fill with the following: Blanch and shred fine or put through the meat grinder one cupful of almonds. In a saucepan put one cupful of sugar, stir and add a teaspoonful of water. Place the frying pan over a slow fire and stir until the mixture turns a golden brown; then add the almonds and stir it briskly until well mixed; spread them quickly over the bottom of the pastry. Fill the shell with a custard, using three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and two cupfuls of milk. Bake until the custard is firm; cover with a meringue flavored with almond and serve cold.

Dainty Sausage.
Put a pound of lean veal and a quarter of a pound of breakfast bacon through the meat chopper. Add a teaspoonful of salt and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper. Press in fat cakes and fry in butter or bacon fat. Make a cream sauce in the pan in which the sausage has been fried and serve with the meat.

Cheese and Tomato Salad.
Peel and slice in rounds large, firm tomatoes. Take fresh American cheese and cut in rounds the size of the tomatoes. Place a slice of cheese between two slices of tomato, spreading on each slice of cheese a little mayonnaise. Arrange on lettuce and serve.
