COAXING YOU TO SMILE.

A doctor came up to a patient in a lunatic asylum, slapped him on the back, and said: "Well old man you're all right. You can run along and write your folks that you'll be back home in two weeks as good as new." The patient went off gaily to write his letter. He had it finished and sealed, but as he was about to affix the stamp the latter slipped through his fingers to the floor, alighted on the back of a cockroach that was passing and stuck. The patient hadn't seen the cockroach. What he did see was his escaped postage stamp zig-zagging aimlessly across the floor and following a crooked trail up the wall and across the ceiling. In depressed silence he tore up the letter that he had just written and dropped the pieces on the floor. "Two weeks", he said, "I won't be out of here in three years."

Nathaniel Hawthorne's handwriting was so illegible that some of his manuscripts remained unpublished because nobody could read them. This was likewise true of Carlyle. The story is told of a type compositor who was employed in a London printing office because of a strong recommendation which he brought from Scotland. The first piece of manuscript given him was by Carlyle. "My God!" said the new typesetter, "Have you got that man here, too? I fled from Scotland to avoid him."

At the conclusion of the school term prizes were distributed. When one of the pupils returned home his mother chanced to be entertaining callers. "Well Charlie," asked one of these, "did you win a prize?" "Not exactly," said Charlie, "but I got a horrible mention."

She was crying unrestrainedly. Not a sound came from the pretty taming lips, but the great tears rolled down her cheeks. The man seemed to enjoy the sight. A sarcastic smile played about the cruel mouth as he watched her; indeed he looked as if he could never have smiled any other kind. The girl's beautiful eyes looked up pleadingly to his. His tongue seemed to lash her like a whip as a torrent of words came hissing from his mouth. Then she crumpled up and gave way entirely to her grief. "Fine, fine," the man cried to her. "Two hundred feet of that is enough. Now we'll shoot a little of the next scene, where you hang by one foot from a five story building." Whereupon the lovely girl chucked the onion overboard.

Finley P. Dunne was talking about the 1919 fashions. "Worse and worse," he said moodily "They grow worse and worse. A beggar held me up the other day. 'Why', I said, as I gave the poor fellow a dime, 'why, isn't this Hottton, the famous impresario?' 'That's me' said the beggar. 'But what old chap', I asked, 'what is the cause of your downfall?' 'The new fashions,' he answered bitterly. 'The new fashions Peter. You see, I used to make a million out of le—I mean limb shows; but the ladies display so many charms for nothing now that the public don't pay to see shows like mine any more'
