

Price and Value

A suit of clothes can cost too much or too little. No possible combination of materials and workmanship can justify $200 for a business suit.

Motor Trucks can cost too much or too little. There is a happy medium—a point where service and price balance—a middle ground where value is greatest.

The limited market for the high priced truck means a small production, high overhead; necessitates a wide margin of profit, an inflated market price. The motor truck built down to a price is an expensive investment. Too many hours in the repair shop, high upkeep, short life, quick depreciation, low resale value.

Bethlehem Motor Trucks are not built down to meet a price or up to justify a price. They represent the right economic combination of proper price and proper value. Buy your Motor Truck on Facts.

What the Editors Say

The Oregonian head line writer must be a graduate from a school of Journalism. He puts "15 L. W. W. held in Coos" over a Tillamook dispatch.—Gazette Times.

The agricultural department in Washington has decided that there is too much water in butter. A little further investigation will convince it that there is too little butter in a dollar's worth.—Telephone Register.

Where is the island of Yap. It has been suggested that the United States make use of its newly acquired island of Yap as a place for the deportation of the "reds". Yap is said to be the only thing we got in the settlement of the war. Who will tell where Yap is?—Telephone Register.

Whatever President Wilson may have promised over the peace table, one thing is sure, England, France and Japan have learned that the president does not constitute the great American public. This is not a one-man government, although it was apparent that Mr. Wilson had those foreigners "buffaloed" into believing that he was "it".—Umpqua Valley News.

The Eugene Guard demands that the professional reformers get busy and stop the people of the United States from ruin by the coffee drinking route. The Guard has discovered from reliable statistics that our people are hitting an awful coffee pace, going on a regular bust-as-it-were. Why not have some freak initiate a bill abolishing the sale or use of coffee in Oregon?—Gazette Times.

The repeal of the daylight saving law over the veto of the president demonstrated for one thing that the farmer gets what he wants, and that the farmers as a group is a force to be reckoned with in this country. Mark Sullivan in a recent issue of Colliers' Weekly shows that the largest single group in the population of this country is the farming element. In a presidential year the farmers contribute a heavy third of the entire vote. It is fortunate for representative government that the farmers as a class are conservative and level-headed. They are opposed to radicalism and the farmers who own their lands fear new "isms." No fundamental change in the economic or political structure of this country can be effected, if it be against the will of the farming population.—News Reporter.

It is clear as day that what prevented ratification of the peace treaty by the senate was the stubborn refusal of the president and his administration to consider any sort of compromise on the questions of reservations. The president took the stand that the senate must forgo its constitutional rights as a treaty-making body. It must accept, without reservation or amendment, the treaty as he brought it back from Paris. He did what he threatened to do when he told the senate that the league of nations covenant had been so inextricably sewed into the treaty that no changes could be made in it without rejecting the treaty altogether. As the Spokesman-Review has repeatedly pointed out persistence in the administration's "no compromise" attitude was sure to wreck the treaty. The attitude did persist, and the treaty was wrecked. The president stood pat, and the democratic senators offered no compromise, although it can hardly be doubted that a compromise could have been effected if the democrats had been willing to recede ever so slightly from their demands.—Spokesman Review.

Restoration of the Death Penalty.

Demand for the restoration of the death penalty for capital crimes is coming from all parts of Oregon. This sentiment has been inspired by many cold-blooded murders in this state and the I. W. W. riots in Washington. Some voters are even insistent that the matter be not deferred until the regular election next year, but that special election be called soon for the purpose of passing upon the matter at once.

While the temper of public sentiment at present would carry capital punishment in any form, the framers of the initiative petition would do well to study the laws of this kind existing in other states. For instance, the Iowa law provides that the death penalty shall only be imposed upon recommendation of the jury. When that recommendation is not made the defendant, if found guilty of murder in the first degree, is sentenced to life imprisonment, but that sentence does not carry with it the hope of ultimate pardon or parole through executive clemency. The governor has no jurisdiction over life prisoners. It requires an act of the legislature to free them. Result: Few life prisoners ever leave the confines of the Iowa penitentiary alive unless they escape. If the proposed Oregon law is framed along similar lines, full measure of justice would be meted out in most cases of murder brought to trial in this state, and we believe the measure would be voted by the people by a large majority.—Itemizer.

Bring on Another Goat.

Speaking at a meeting of the Women's Executive committee of the Republican States committee of New York on November 17, Paul D. Cravath, who went abroad with Col. House in 1917 and later accompanied the American Treasury Mission to Paris as its legal adviser, declared that President Wilson was a "great leader," but that he had instituted a "dangerous system of personal government," had surrounded himself with his own "little coterie," resulting in "terrible incompetency" caused by "narrow little members of this coterie." Does a "great leader" surround himself with and delegate his duties to members of a "narrow little coterie," with the result that "terrible incompetency" characterizes the management of his administration of public business?

Sarcoux in Missouri had a "duplicate wedding" the other day, the bridegrooms were twins, also the brides. The two men are both veterinary surgeons. Both couples are to live in the same county and their homes have been furnished exactly alike. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Loveless will live in one and Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Loveless in the other.

Three Million Men Rebuild France.

Two hundred million working days will be required to complete the reconstruction of the devastated region of France. To finish the task in one year it is estimated it will require approximately 1,500,000 men, including 150,000 bricklayers. For the construction of 100,000 buildings destroyed the total of 22,000,000 tons of material will be required. Three million tons of material and 1,500,000 men will be needed to construct railroads in regions where the war was fought.

The rejuvenation of the war area is said to be one of the surprises to battlefield visitors. Lille, Soissons, Rheims, Verdun and even such shattered remnants of prewar glory as Arras, Ypres and Bapaume hum with energy and life amidst appalling desolation.

During the first ten and a half months after signing of the armistice the United Kingdom exported to Germany goods of the value of over $80,000,000 and received from that country imports valued at about $1,000,000. Details of these imports and exports were given by Sir Auckland Geddes, president of the British board of trade.

Berger, the German Socialist who was convicted of disloyalty and sentenced to twenty years in prison, has been excluded from the House of Representatives, to which the more or less disloyal German Socialists of Wisconsin elected him—by the sufficiently decisive vote of 309 to 1. Had there been no other count against him, the unseemly harangue which he made at his hearing before the House should have been sufficient cause for that action. The solitary and unique vote in his favor was cast by a Wisconsin member, whose record in "Who's Who" begins thus: "Goigt, Edward, congressman, born in Bremen, Germany."

The people are willing to pay the salaries of such clerks as are needed to carry on business, but are not willing to keep clerks on the pay roll simply because they do not want to look elsewhere for work. An officer who made a tour through one Washington department reported that only a few women workers had anything to do the others were knitting or doing fancy work. This can be done at home as well as in Washington and with far less expense to the people who pay the bills.

It is estimated by Congressman James W. Dunbar, of Indiana, that during the coming year our annual expenditures will approximate $5,000,000,000, which will amount to about $50 for every man, woman and child of our population.

Timing Himself.

"Say, Jim, what happened at your house yesterday? I went past there and your wife was singing, 'Nearer My God To Thee.'"

"Yes, that's the one song she cooks eggs by. Two stanzas for soft boils, three stanzas for the hard boiled."

Lives of married men remind us We must not make wifey sore And departing leave behind us Mudprints on her kitchen floor.

Protesting His Guard.

A huge, burly soldier was arrested for drunkenness and confined to the guardhouse. His constant attendant for the next few days was a little timid guard, who pattered around after him like a child. One morning they were late to mess, whereat the cook assailed the guard.

"Can't you come on time! This ain't no hotel!" he shouted. The guard shrank away, and the cook, emboldened struck him. Instantly the big prisoner intervened with a well aimed blow at the cook.

"Hey you!" he roared, "you leave my guard alone! I ain't going to have anyone at all tussling him."
