Editorial Snap Shots.

Governor Olcott has made the announcement that he is going to call a special session of the state legislature next month. When a special session was suggested a few months ago he wanted the state law makers to forego their pay. He don't appear to be worrying now about that.

If the snap shot man was one of the school directors of the view district he would be in favor of giving the youths a nice little Christmas box of $5 each for saving the building from fire on Tuesday, just to show them how the district appreciated their prompt action and good judgment when an emergency arose.

True there is considerable more crime and of more serious character, than in pre-war times, and no one can blame it to booze. We are one of those who believe that if the country was "wet" there would be more crime and far more drunkenness, for some people are spending their money similar to the Democratic government—like a lot of drunken sailors.

It is not surprising that the Germans are protesting about the terms of peace the allied countries inflicted upon them, for most of us remember the boastful manner in which the war lords of that country talked during the war. Should Germany refuse to sign the protocol, then it would be well to do what should have been done before the armistice was signed, the allied armies in possession of Berlin.

We are receiving as much "dope" from various institutions as we did during the war. It is about time that these institutions were reducing their expenses, for it looks to us that a large amount of money that was subscribed for charitable and patriotic purposes is being eaten up by those who hold offices. "Cut it out and go to work and don't waste the people's money," is what we are writing on some of the correspondence and returning it.

The cost of news print paper is again causing more or less worry to newspaper publishers, for after a survey had been made it was found that there was but little surplus news print paper in the United States. With news print paper costing three to four times more than it did before the war, newspaper publishers see a large amount of their profits vanish, with a hard boat to row in the future. The increased cost of news print paper will put more newspapers out of business this winter.

The county teachers have gone on record as favoring school districts providing cottages for teachers. Happy thought. Why not provide cottages for state, county and city officials, with a nigger servant to do the chores and drive the teachers and officials to their work in automobiles in the morning, drive them home at noon and call for them long about four or five o'clock. How lovely. When those delightful times come, we are inclined to think that we might throw our hat into the ring as a candidate.

Senator George Chamberlain has gone on a junket trip with Secretary Baker to formally open the Panama Canal. That accounts for our George being able to hand out the political jobs in Oregon, for he must have been received back into open arms by the administration. And our George also at the dictation of President Wilson voted against the treaty of peace and the league of nations after it had been Americanized by the United States Senate. How George is going to square himself with the people of Oregon is hard to tell since he became a rubber stamp senator.

One of the questions now uppermost in the minds of Republicans is: Who will receive the Republican nomination for president? We believe it will be General Wood, for President Wilson did a mean trick, he "kept him out of war," because he was a friend of Mr. Roosevelt, although Wood was one of the best generals in the United States and the country should not have been deprived of his services in France with the American army. That was one foolish thing President Wilson did, but it is acting as a boomerang and, in our judgment, will not only give Wood the nomination at the Republican convention, but the Democratic party will be so badly whipped that the untried will wonder what struck them.

We believe it. In discussing the question of discipline in the schools Prof. Mathews, of the Willamette University, made some pertinent remarks on that subject. His advice, first, was probably for school directors, when he advised the employment of teachers who could keep good order in the school room. We may add to this that if there were more discipline in the home there would be better discipline in the school. We do not know how Prof. Mathews arrived at his figures, but he made the statement that 15 per cent of the women and 22 per cent of the men teachers failed in discipline. That is a better percentage than we thought and if the men teachers will stiffen up their back a bit this can be greatly reduced, for good discipline in a public school is one thing that should be expected, and insisted upon by every school board.

The dedication of the new school building at Nehalem on Saturday goes to prove what can be accomplished by united co-operation and pulling together, for Nehalem has a school building that the people of that district have just reason to be proud of. It is a modern up-to-date structure with four rooms and a basement, located on a site with a splendid landscape overlooking the Nehalem valley, with the mountains for a background, and we do not know of another grade school in the county that is so pleasantly situated. When finished it will cost the district over $20,000; and we want to say it was money well spent, for it is the most up-to-date industry in the city of Nehalem. What took place on Saturday was the culmination of earnest effort on the part of the people of the district, and in having such an excellent school board of progressive business men, for we were informed that one of the directors, H. W. Tohl, was Johnny on the spot from the time the building was first started until it was finished, seeing to it that the best of workmanship was put into the building. Another moving spirit in the enterprise was that of Mr. Brimhall, the principal of the school, and it is largely to his untiring efforts that the new building was erected, who had the co-operation of County School Superintendent Lamb in helping solve some of the problems that were encountered when the proposition of the new building was first discussed. The snap shot man went to congratulate the district, the school board, the county superintendent and others who took an active part in promoting the erection of such an excellent school building, for it seems to us they did a splendid job.

We copy a very "enlightened" editorial from the Cloverdale Enterprise: "The treatment received by an American prohibition speaker in England a few weeks ago shows that England is not more than half civilized. If those who attacked the speaker did not wish to hear him they could have remained away. Instead they go like a band of anarchists and cutthroats and abuse him putting an eye out. "England has a monarchial government and is about as much democratic as she is civilized. Her secret treaty with Japan to give that country a slice of China shows that she will sell the principles of right for gain. I am proud of these United States that fought for the good of humanity and not for selfish greed. As long as she will stand for those principles and put the anarchists out she will be a model nation and a light unto the rest of the world."

The Rev. Puseyfoot Johnson went to England in behalf of the prohibition movement, when a number of young men undertook to play a practical joke on the preacher, similar to those that frequently take place at our colleges and universities, and Puseyfoot Johnson lost one eye, but there is nothing to show that the young men intended to do him bodily harm, but in the rough play the preacher was injured. On account of that the rev. gentleman who runs the Cloverdale sheet says that "shows that England is not more than half civilized." Then the same remark must apply to the people living in our college and university towns, where hazing is often carried on, and to repeat what is said in the editorial "they go like a band of anarchists and cutthroats."

Here, however, is the funny part of the editorial: "Her (England's) secret treaty with Japan to give that country a slice of China shows that she would sell the principles of right for gain." It needs but few words to answer this. The treaty of peace and the league covenant stipulates that Japan is to acquire Shantung which President Wilson agreed to and which was freely criticized by Republican Senators and people all over the United States as decidedly unjust to treat China in that manner, depriving that country of a large amount of land. It must be, then, that the United States is just as guilty as England, for President Wilson would not consent to a change in the treaty whereby China could get a square deal. As the rev. editor of the Enterprise has come to the conclusion that England is only half civilized because a practical joke was played on the preacher, what must the people of England think about civilization in the United States after reading what the assassins did at Centralia?

Another thing we would like to enlighten the Cloverdale preacher on. The United States did not go to war for what he calls "humanity" nor for democracy. It went to war because Germany, in her ruthless, cold blooded warfare attacked American vessels and left the crews and passengers to drown, to-wit: the Lusitania, when over 100 American citizens lost their lives. It was to protect the lives and honor of the United States that involved this country in war with Germany, even if the Democratic slogan was: "He kept us out of war."

And we would like to enlighten the Cloverdale editor upon another point. England "the half civilized country," went to war three years before the United States for "humanity," for when Germany broke the Belgium treaty, England declared war to protect the smaller country.

NEHALEM SCHOOL DEDICATED.

A Most Up-To-Date Building—Visitors Make Congratulatory Addresses.

Saturday last the new school building at Nehalem was dedicated with appropriate exercises, and the event provided most enjoyable to all present. England "the half civilized country," went to war three years before the United States for "humanity," for when Germany broke the Belgium treaty, England declared war to protect the smaller country.

Prof. Brimhall was master of ceremonies, made a few appropriate remarks in regard to dedicating the new building, and in having such a representative body of men to take part. Mr. Brimhall gave a hearty welcome to the audience and to the visitors. The first speaker called upon was:

J. A. Churchill, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who highly complimented the district for building such a splendid school building, which he considered was a great achievement for Nehalem. He said that he found, in traveling over the state there were different kinds of leaders and different types of people and the best kind of leaders were those of the representative class who were broad minded in public school leadership, and he congratulated the Nehalem people as belonging to that class who were willing to make sacrifices and spend money so that the children of the district could obtain a good education. He said the country was exceedingly interested in education at the present time, and then discussed the Smith Turner bill now before congress, which, if passed, will give Oregon $500,000 of federal money every year, provided the state matches it with another $500,000, which would give the state $1,000,000. Mr. Churchill estimated that it would require only a tax of one mill to raise that amount of money. He then discussed where the federal money would be used under different heads. Mr. Churchill was in favor of a law whereby the pupils should be kept in school or until such time as they could pass the high school examination, and in favoring the increase in the school age to 18, he referred to the illiteracy of men drafted, when it was discovered that 700,000 of the men could neither read nor write. In closing Mr. Churchill highly commended Mr. Brimhall for the part he had taken in the building of the new school building.

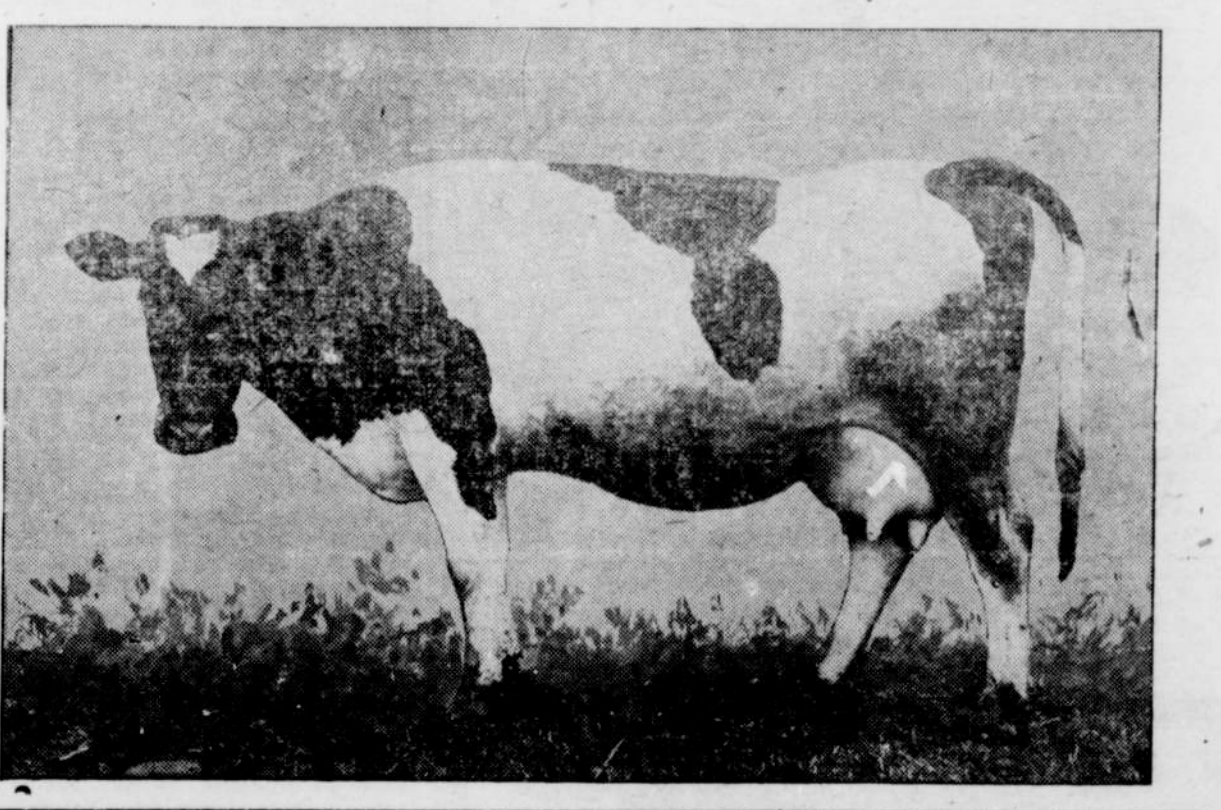

J. F. Mathews, department of mathematics, Willamette University was the next speaker, who was followed by state senator T. B. Handley, Rev. Oliver, County School Supt. G. B. Lamb, and County Agriculturist R. C. Jones, who presented the school with a picture of a Holstein cow, and in doing so contended that in a dairy county the schools should have pictures of dairy cows, so that the pupils could study the beauty of these animals. The other speakers were E. K. Barnes, of the Tillamook High School, and editors Fred C. Baker and Nunn.

It was in the interest of Tillamook Chapter, American Red Cross, that Mr. Baker spoke, asking the people of that district to finish its roll call drive as soon as possible, and Mr. Oliver who is chairman of the home service work in Tillamook County, drew attention to what the Tillamook Chapter American Red Cross was doing to help ex-service men. All the speakers highly complimented Nehalem people on their enterprise and progressiveness in erecting such a splendid building, and Mr. Brimhall also complimented the school board, especially H. W. Tohl, who had seen to it that the building was put up in first class shape and had carefully watched its construction from the time work was first started until its completion. The other members of the board are C. H. Christensen and C. E. Allen.

Tillamook Cow Makes Over 15,000 lbs. of Milk and 600 lbs. Butter Fat in Less Than Ten Months.
We present herewith a photograph of a pure bred Holstein cow owned by Rollie W. Watson, which was taken at 4 year Jr, just before freshening with third calf—and all of the calves from this cow have been bulls. "May" came fresh March 2nd and has produced over 15,000 lbs. milk which were obtained with nothing but ordinary farm care. The value of this milk at around 8c. The value of this milk is around 80c. per pound for fat will make a return of $480.00, the calf was sold to Pius Jacobs for $100.00 making a total of $580.00. The cow is milking about three gallons, or from 20 to 25 lbs. per day at the present time, will make a gross return of over $600.00 this year. With the foregoing results but ordinary farm care it is suggestive of the fact that it pays to keep good cows. A small herd of good cows will pay better returns than a large herd of poor ones. There is no argument against this fact. The sooner the dairymen of Tillamook County begin to realize this the sooner will their incomes grow proportionately.
