New York Sun: "President Poincare opened the Paris aircraft show Friday, thus giving official sanction to the greatest exhibition of aircraft ever assembled. It is the sixth exhibition of Aerial Locomotion, the first held since 1913. In the intervening years aircraft builders have been too busy to exhibit their products. It includes 'marvels which almost exceed the flights of fancy.' And it discloses one thing which must humiliate every American: There is not a single American offering in the show."

Petaluma (Calif.) Argus: "The contest between the President and the Senate over the peace treaty seems to be a battle to a finish. The Senate will not ratify the treaty without reservations, and the President says he will 'pocket' the treaty if it is ratified with reservations; and there you are! If such an impasse is reached there is but one conclusion that can be drawn: That is that the President is determined to usurp the constitutional powers of the Senate in the matter of treaty making and set himself up as Lord High Executioner. Let us hope the senate stands on its rights."

Boise (Idaho) Statesman: "Announcement made by Senator Hitchcock, as well as announcements issued from the White House, all indicate that President Wilson will continue to refuse to compromise in order to meet half way the Senate's attitude on the peace treaty and league of nations covenant. When Mr. Wilson went to Paris he compromised on a number of things. His 'freedom of the seas' principle went into the discard. No annexations and no indemnities followed post haste. Open covenants of peace openly arrived at were not heard of after the actual conference began. 'Self-determination of peoples' is violated by the Shantung provision and others which have Mr. Wilson's approval. Why, when the President was so ready to compromise with the diplomats of foreign nations, he is now so unready to effect any compromise with the Senate?"

Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Massachusetts, declared that if the democratic party goes into the national campaign with the league of nations as the dominant issue it will meet disaster. He asserts that the only escape for the party from the inevitable defeat lies in the acceptance of the reservations to the peace treaty favored by the majority of the senate. He says: "I hope the league of nations will not figure as an issue in the campaign. If it is injected into the campaign it will become the predominant issue and overshadow all domestic issues. The Democratic party is seriously divided on this international question and in my opinion a campaign on this issue would be disastrous to the Democratic party. From the outset of the Democratic party would be placed on the defensive. It would be required to explain why the administration democrats did not accept the reservations which the Republicans offered and which they claimed would protect American rights and interests. It is not difficult to predict in advance what the decision of the American people would be in a fight between the two parties on the question of Americanism against internationalism."

Kansas City Star: "The case of a Connecticut girl was reported the other day. She had just been made the president of a million dollar concern whose employment she had entered fifteen years ago at the fat salary of $12 a week. Incidentally, the same girl conducted a farm of her own near the place of her employment and from the two sources was said to have accumulated a fortune of nearly a quarter million. Of course she could not have done what she did unless she had had more than ordinary ability. But also she would not have proved that she had unusual ability if she hadn't worked hard and faithfully and shown a disposition to use her head. The boy or girl on a small salary who doesn't try for all there is in him may not be throwing away the chance to become head of a big business. At least he is throwing away the chance that every person with health and any sort of training has of making a comfortable and satisfactory place for himself in the world. It is still as true as it was when Emerson said it, that America is another name for opportunity."

Rep. Martin B. Madden, of Illinois, has described how public money is being wasted and thrown to the winds in Washington by keeping on the payrolls many thousands of employees who services are not needed. Saying most people in the country realize that conditions in Washington were not what they should be. Mr. Madden proceeded: "Before the war I think the departments had altogether about 30,000—maybe, a few more than that—clerks in all branches of the services here, and now I think we have about 110,000, and I think everybody concedes that there are about 40,000 more than we ought to have even under present conditions. I do not have to remind gentlemen here that not long since, during the early part of 1919, we went so far as to appropriate to pay the transportation charge to all who were willing to separate themselves from the service of their homes, and after all we could not get them separated from the service. I have gone through branches of the service, when I have had come in view at least a thousand people between the hours of 10 o'clock and 11 o'clock in the morning—and one would suppose that would be the busiest hour of the day. I have gone into rooms where they had groups of stenographers, anyway from five to ten in a group, and not a stenographer doing anything."

Charles W. Fear in the Missouri Trade Unionist, Joseph, Mo.: Conservative, patriotic American union men must wake up and take charge of running the union affairs of America. Must attend the unions and curb the radicals, or the whole labor movement of the nation will run pell mell to ruin! Half-baked union men, irresponsible self-appointed leaders in many cases, have assumed to take full charge of affairs in all too many cases. Unwise strikes have been illegally organized and called, against the wishes and advice of responsible leaders, and in open violation of existing agreements and contracts. Union workmen, working under agreement, have violated these agreements, taken vacations (?) concerted and violated every union principle—refused to support and obey national or international officers, and otherwise brought the whole American labor movement into disrepute and contempt in many cases. Organized labor is today in bad with a large portion of the nation—and even union men themselves are repudiating and denouncing the unwise acts of other union men and other fellow-workers. The conditions in the country demand that the real union men of the nation—the conservative, steady working, stay-at-home fellows—wake up and attend the meetings of their craft unions, the central bodies, the state conventions, and the national gatherings—and rout the radical element—curb their unreasonable, irrational acts—and save organized labor in the country before it is too late."

Professor Garfield realizes the feelings of the small boy who is induced to ring the door bell for the crowd and then is left to take the licking from the indignant house-holder.

Sam has things to learn: "A woman in Buffalo was killed in the rush at an army food sale. Uncle Sam with all his ability, does not yet know how to conduct a bargain sale."

In South Dakota candidates for president are required to state their platforms in eight words. South of the Ohio Democratic candidates state their platforms in six letters: "Niggah."

Couldn't lose by the trade; Newt Baker may have a change for the presidency, but if he gets an opportunity to trade his chance for anything tangible he would do well to make the exchange.

It is announced by the Giornale d'Italia that Prince von Buelow, former German Ambassador to Italy, will go to Rome, accompanied by Princess von Buelow, returning to the villa which they own there.

The people who say President Wilson is "the foremost statesman of the age" probably mean the most foremost statesman. That is to say, he has been for most everything anyone can think about at one time or another.

These people who are always trying to start new parties are taking a lot of chances. How do they know their baby will not grow up as big a disappointment as the one that might have kept everybody fooled forever if it had always stayed out of power.

The United States Supreme Court declares that "a treaty is only a proposal until approved by the Senate." This seems to dispose of the belief into which some people have persuaded themselves that the Senate is merely interfering with Mr. Wilson's private treaty.

The Massachusetts state grange, in its forty-seventh annual convention, went on record as unalterably opposed to the forty-four hour week on the ground that it does not give sufficient working time to accomplish the big reconstruction program that confronts this country.

Admiral William Sims, the commander-in-chief of the American naval forces in European waters throughout the war, has refused to accept the distinguished service medal awarded to him by Secretary of the navy Daniels. In a forcible letter to the Secretary, the admiral explains why he must protest against the manner in which Mr. Daniels has changed the awards which the naval board made for war service and adds that, in justice to the men who served under his command he cannot accept the decoration for himself.
