Coaxing You to Smile.

Joke on the Highwayman.
"Hands up" cried the business-like highwayman. The victim laughed as he complied. "The joke is on you," he asserted, chuckling. "I've just paid a large bill sent by a lawyer for aiding me to fill out my income tax schedule. A month ago my landlord raised my rent. My son has just come home from France and can't get a job. Yesterday my salary was decreased. Today the bank in which I kept the remnant of my money went smash. I've been looking all night for one of you chaps. I want to learn this hold-up business." Weeping bitterly the highwayman thrust the revolver into his would-be victim's hands and disappeared in the darkness.

Knowledge Unnecessary.
Little seven year old James came home from school the first day with a determined look on his face. He was decided on one point. "Mother," he cried. "I'm going to quit school and be a school teacher." "Why, James," said his mother, laughing "how can you? You don't know enough." "Don't know enough" exclaimed the would-be teacher. "You don't have to know anything. All you have to do is to ask questions."

Not For Her.
Apropos of the modern fashions, Senator Watson told a story at a Rushville (Ind.) dinner. "A struggling business man," he said, "came home one evening with a joyful countenance. 'My poor dear,' he said to his wife, 'I have just been admitted to the League of Reconstruction Profiters. Our hard times are over now. At least you can have some decent dresses.' A steely glitter came into the women's eyes. 'No you dont, Joseph,' she said, 'I'll have just the same kind of dresses all the other women are wearing.'"

Very Much Convalescent.
Helen had the whooping cough, and so was not invited to her little friend Margaret's birthday party, though the list included all the other children in the neighborhood. On the morning of the affair the telephone girl might have overheard the following conversation:
"Hello."
"Hello, is this Margaret Hillfield's house?"
"Yes."
"Is this you, Margaret?"
"Yes, who is this?"
"This is Helen Martin. You are going to have a birthday party today, aren't you?"
"Well, say Margaret. I'm all over the whooping cough now."

At The Zoo.
The dear old thing, with her usual stock of questions, was visiting the Zoo. "Keeper," she said, tapping him with her umbrella, "what do you consider to be the most remarkable animal in these wonderful gardens?" "Well, ma'am," replied the keeper thoughtfully, "after careful consideration, as you might say, I should say that there laughing hyena gets the prize." "Indeed, my good man! and what makes you think that?" "Well, he only has a sleep once a week, and a meal once a month and drink once a year," said the keeper moving on. "So what he has to laugh about beats me."

She Knew Him Not.
They were very fond of each other, and had been engaged, but they had quarreled, and were too proud to make it up. He called afterwards at her house—to see her father on business. She was at the door. "Ah—Miss Blank, I believe?" said he. "Is your father in?" "No sir," she replied, "father is not, at present. Do you wish to see him personally?" "Yes" was the bluff response of the visitor, who felt that his former sweetheart was yielding. "I want to see him on very particular business," and he turned away haughtily. "I beg your pardon," she called after him, as he reached the last step, "but who shall I say called?"

Facing a Shortage.
An English schoolboy wrote: "England has much coal beds when it is finished we shall have to use our brains for fuel, and it will be scarce."
