About everything else has happened to the country that could happen; why shouldn't we have another Bryan boom?

Nobody's holding anyone in the Republican presidential contest. It's a free field and no favors and may the best man win.

The various statesmen mentioned in connection with the Democratic presidential nomination might draw cuts and hang the thing on the loser.

Former Senator Pettigrew says the Republicans could elect a yellow dog for President this year, but that doesn't mean they are going to nominate one.

It is said that Col. Bryan is "the only man who can poll the Irish vote." Presumably that's because he has acquired a son-in-law in the British army.

Colonel House is said to be casting about for a new leader for the Democratic party. Where did the Colonel get the idea that the people of the United States are anxious for him to do the Warwick act again?

On January 1st, last year, President Wilson woke up in Buckingham Palace as the guest of King George, but he really didn't wake up until later in 1919, in the U. S. A.

When Wm. J. Bryan was told that his name had been presented as a presidential candidate in Michigan he said: "This is so sudden." It's awful to surprise a fellow like that.

More railway mileage was abandoned in the United States last year than was built. Probably political management of railways would in time solve the railway problem by causing all the tracks to be torn up.

Edmond Pillon, a French aviator pilot, established a new record for looping the loop the other day when he made twenty-nine in five minutes. Pillon was testing a small new airplane built for sport.

How can Colonel Bryan run for president as an apostle of discontent? If the thirty-cent dollar is the cure for all that ails us, as the Colonel used to say, everybody ought to be perfectly satisfied.

Attorney General Palmer's effort to kill off the high cost of living by gassing it doesn't seem to be working out as well as expected. It still appears that there's nothing cheap but talk.

We are told that without the federal reserve act we couldn't have financed the war. Well, the old receipts for inflating the currency and borrowing money might have worked—you can't tell.

In the platform in which they originally elected President Wilson there was a blank declaring for a single term in the presidency, but just at present it looks as if the trouble from now on would be even to get a single term for any democratic candidate.

President Wilson compromised with the representatives of foreign powers at Paris, but thinks it beneath his dignity to yield an inch to those officials of his own country who are charged by the constitution with joint responsibility in making treaties.

The Saturday Evening Post says "no matter what the right or wrong of the treaty question is," the people are sore because it has not been decided. But the right and wrong of the question does matter to a lot of people, who would prefer no decision at all to a decision harmful to their country.

Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis says that Wall Street is conspiring to discredit Wilson. That is probably the plot that is being engineered by Barney Baruch and W. G. McAdoo to revenge Wall Street for the hard time speculators have been having since the new freedom paralyzed the plutocrats and chased the money devils to the tall timbers.

The much bedamned Carnegie at the time of his death had given $350,000,000 to the public and as his death left the remaining thirty million dollars to friends and philanthropies. Of his $145,000,000 Henry C. Frick gave $120,000,000 to the public at his death. The "reds" who denounced these two men are generous with other people's money, but did you ever notice them giving away much of their own?

Lloyd George says that Australia is entitled to as many votes as the United States in the league of nations because she lost more men in the war. But as Liberia and Hayti, along with a lot of other nations that didn't lose a man, have the same number of votes in the assembly as either Australia or the United States, or even the United Kingdom or France, Lloyd George presumably hasn't stated the real basis of representation in that remark.
