Topics of Interest.

Right of Inheritance.
A man was traveling in Texas when he met a certain Colonel Gore. He tried to find out how the Colonel had come by his military title. It seemed that the man had not participated in the Civil War, nor had he fought the Indians or the Spaniards. "Yet you seem," said the stranger, "too old a man to have served across the water. Perhaps you once commanded the Texas Rangers. They were brave men, and it was an honor to lead them."
"No," said Colonel Gore gruffly, "I never had nothin' to do with the Rangers."
"Then," said the stranger, "is the title merely assumed? Have you really no right to it?"
"Of course I've got a right to it," said Colonel Gore, "the best right in the world—the right of inheritance."
"You inherited it?" said the stranger with a dazed look. "Inherited it from your father I suppose."
"No, sir," said the Colonel; "I inherited it from Col. Schuyler Montgomery. I married his widow sir."

Little Difference Now.
"Write to your friends," said the Mexican bandit; "tell them we have kidnapped you and they must send a ransom." "But I haven't any friends who would pay enough to make it worth while," protested the prisoner.
"All right. Then you write to your friends and tell 'em you have kidnapped us. We've got to get funds into this camp somehow."
Shifting the Scenery.
Harry Lauder golfs with more enthusiasm than skill, and one day on the links he was in unusually bad form.
At the fourth hole Sir Harry dislodged an unusually large sod. The sod rose up into the air and sailed like a great bird down the wind, and Sir Harry's caddy, watching it, said to his companion:
"Did you tell me that guy was an actor Pete?"
"Sure, Bill," said the other caddy, a note of apology in his voice. "An actor—that's what they call him."
The first caddy took a thoughtful chew of tobacco.
"I'd call him a scene shifter," he said.

Not From Her.
"I can't think, John, where that child got his temper from!" exclaimed that child's mother, when he had been removed screaming from the room. "No one can say its from me!"
"No one," agreed the farmer's meek voice behind the weekly paper. "For you've certainly got yours."

The Poets Difficulty.
Prof. Brander Matthews said at a Columbia tea:
"The mathematical mind can't appreciate poetry. You remember the mathematician who began Tennyson's stirring 'Half a league, half a league, half a league—' and then put down the volume contemptuously muttering:
"If the fellow means a league and a half why can't he say so?"
"Another mathematician listened to a minor poet reciting one of his own songs—a song that said the poet's body was in the office, but his soul was in the country, communing with nature.
"Asked afterwards what he thought of the song the mathematician said:
"Well, that poet isn't the first one who couldn't keep body and soul together."

What He Got.
At the conclusion of the school term prizes were distributed. When one of the pupils returned home his mother chanced to be entertaining callers.
"Well, Charley," asked one of these, "did you get a prize?"
"Not exactly," said Charley, "but I got a horrible mention."

One On the C. O.
With the demobilization of the army some new stories are being demobilized too. One is the story of the commanding officer had acquired or "won" (as they say in the army) a cow, and he was much excited in all the messes. The adjutant had a cottage with a garden in which he had some good strawberries. One day the C. O. without a word went into his garden and helped himself to the adjutant's strawberries. The adjutant could not, of course, rebuke his chief, but he put up this notice: "Trespassers in this strawberry garden will have their cow shot."

Brutal Customs.
Gov. Goodrich, of Indiana, said in a discussion of old Christmas customs "The old customs that have fallen out of use were a little too coarse and brutal for these ultra-refined times. Take, for instance, the old custom of serving a boar's head at the Christmas dinner.
"I know a rich man who thought he'd revive the old custom on Christmas, and accordingly a boar's head formed the dinner's seventh course. When the head was brought in on a great silver platter, a lemon in the mouth and the fierce eyes staring glassily straight ahead, the effect was tremendous.
"The rich man serving slices of the head, came to the turn of his little son.
"Well Willie, will you have some?"
"Yes, papa," Willie answered in an awed whisper, "but please cut his off a piece where it isn't looking."

Advocates of the overthrow of the protective policy declare that America has acquired a new interest in the property of Europe. But Americans, it is to be hoped, have not lost their old first interest in the prosperity of America.
