One of the things that is the matter with the country is that the people took the magazine muck rakers, uplifters and reformers too seriously, and have been experiencing the results. Yet this outfit is still busily engaged in telling the people what to do.

The Good Old Days.

Today it is a poor egg that doesn't bring a nickel, and butter is worth 70 cents the pound. The old-timer looks back over the years. He sighs for the good old times. Eggs were 10 cents a dozen and butter 20 cents a pound says the Miami News.

But does he really want the "good old times"? Let's see.
In those days people had parlors and didn't use them. Now they have living rooms and wear 'em almost out.

They lighted their homes with kerosene hanging lamps.
Fellows took their girls out buggy riding and knew nothing of the joy of a fleet motor car.

Men were paid a dollar a day on the section, and the other day laborer just a little above him, was paid ten dollars a week.

As some other man has said, when a person had weak lungs they began to select a nice green spot in the "marble orchard" for him, and if your appendix got tangled up, they said you had inflammation of the bowels and they buried you deep.

And women wore bustles and long gummy skirts and had limbs instead of legs.

Houses were heated by stoves of one kind or another. And—bath tubs and other toilet facilities there were none. Remember those cold winter nights with the ordinary lot 220 feet long?

Yes, those were not the good old days. Let 'em keep their 10-cent eggs and their 20-cent butter. Living in 1920 is worth more than it costs, even if it costs more than it did.

Wouldn't Woodrow like to wake up some morning and find out that he had been dreaming all this stuff about having brought back a treaty of peace with a league of nations covenant? Oh, boy, that would be a grand and glorious feeling.

Sam Blythe says politics is rotten. If Sam is speaking of the politics of the administration he and the other Wilson press agents helped shove over on the country he is right, but, curiously enough, the statement is made as part of a campaign to perpetuate some of the loud smells which these very press agents advertised as political attire of roses.

What the Editors Say Coaxing You to Smile. Political Band Wagon.

Isn't the Portland Journal having a time with politics these days? Republican politics have so convulsed the editorial staff that the news staff aided by its Washington bureau has come to the rescue in making it appear that the G. O. P. is to have a repetition of the split of 1912. Good night!—News Reporter.

The Roseburg papers could no longer stand the increasing cost of producing newspapers and the two have consolidated under the name of the Roseburg News-Review. Both publishers remain in the business and we wonder how they are going to harmonize their conflicting political news.—The Sentinel.

A New York Medico, who probably has tried them all ways, is authority for the statement that kisses in the morning are more unsanitary than at night, after the sunshine has had an opportunity to sweeten the lips. Only the brave deserve the fair, and the man who refuses a morning kiss for fear of the danger may be put down as a coward unworthy the love of any girl worth having. We'll take ours stewed, fried, boiled, uncooked, sterilized or unsterilized.—The Sentinel.

Newspaper men are getting more sense as the years go by. A newspaper used to be published for spite purposes or politics. Nowadays a newspaper is regarded as a business proposition, and two daily newspapers in a town the size of Roseburg is one too many. They are an imposition on the merchants. We congratulate Messrs. Bates and Whimberly on their good sense in consolidating their enterprises.—Gazette Times.

Truth is, that we have as many radicals in Oregon, in proportion to our population as has Washington, but we have been able to hold them in check through the efforts of a comparatively level headed man, aided by the conservative newspapers of the state that have frowned upon men and measures that have appeared inimical to our growing prosperity. The same newspaper is by far the greatest factor we have in keeping irresponsible citizens from getting far with dangerous propaganda, and is so recognized by thinking people.—Oregon City Enterprise.

When this country succumbs to the principle that "might is right" may the good Lord have compassion upon the people, yet that is the doctrine preached by the I. W. W. organization, and this is an extract from their bible: "We are not fogged by illusions of right or wrong. We do not bow at the shrine of tender phrases. Might is right. Let us learn the lesson and organize until we are the mightiest. Where sits the general executive board of the I. W. W. there will sit the government of the United States." There it is in a nutshell, and those believing in such teachings should lose no time in joining the Haywood ranks in their effort to overthrow the government.—Sheridan Sun.

Typical of the hypocrisy of the Portland Journal is its present attempt to curry favors with the country press that it has injured so vitally in the past. The Journal joins in with complaints made by the country papers that some of the city dailies are printing issues altogether too large in size while there is a scarcity of news print paper, thus working a hardship in price on the country press. While the complaint of the state press has merit, the sanctimonious attitude of the Journal is not as discredited as its preny editorial would indicate. The reason the Journal is holding down its size is not out of any philanthropic desire to alleviate the news print shortage. It is because the Journal has a paper contract which limits it to a certain definite supply at the low contract price, while the competitors about whom it complains have contracts for much larger quantities of paper and hence can print larger issues. It is a case of sour grapes with the Journal.—Oregon Voter.

No Shield for Slackers.

General Wood objects to our 4,800-000 men who have had military training being made a sheltering shield for slackers. He does not accept the contention that so long as we have these trained men to call upon in a war emergency there is no necessity of training any more men. In a recent speech in South Dakota he said:

"I am inclined to think that the American Legion and ex-service men generally feel that they have done their part in the war and they do not propose to be the perpetual, everlasting fighting force, with the slackers behind them, who do not want to train."

Beyond a doubt General Wood here speaks the ex-service men's minds. They surely have done their part. They are still in the vigor of their young manhood, most of them. If we were again plunged into war while that party remains with them, beyond a peradventure they would be the first over the top. They have acquired the habit of following the American flag wherever it may lead. But, as General Wood says, they do not intend that their training and their staunch patriotism shall be a perennial shield for slackers. Our oncoming generation of young men are not to be left to degenerate into a breed of mollycoddies behind a rampart of nearly five million young veterans.

General Wood is right. They have done their part, these ex-service men. Now let the country and the oncoming youth of the country do theirs.—Harvey's Weekly.

"Pa, what is an idealist?" "Usually he is a man, my boy, who has high notions of what the other fellows ought to do."

Obscure.
"How did Jones come out with that scheme of his to learn three new words every day?"
"It didn't work. He learned the words all right, but when he used them nobody knew what they meant."

Looking Forward.
They had just become engaged.
"I shall love," she cooed, "to share all your griefs and troubles."
"But, darling," he replied, "I have none."
"No," she agreed; "but I mean when we are married."

A Little More Than Kin.
Last year I asked my best girl to become my wife, and she said "No." But I got even with the girl. I married her mother. Then my father married the girl. Now I don't know what I am.

When I married the girl's mother the girl became my daughter, and when father married my daughter she was my mother. Who in the dickens am I? My mother's mother (which is my wife) must be my grandmother, and I being my grandmother's husband, I am my own grandfather.

Resigned.
"When you are going to have your vacation?"
"Not going to have any."
"But I thought that you were going to spend a month with your wife and the children at the seashore."
"I am."

The Colonel's Lady's Maid.
A young flying officer met a pretty girl—informally at Coney Island one afternoon. She was dressed awfully swell, and when they separated she gave him a very fashionable New York address; so the next time he was in town he wired her to meet him at the Ritz for dinner.

She turned up, looking smarter than ever, and after dinner they did a theatre. A brother officer sat in a box and the young airman waited to him, but got a rather quizzical response.

"What ails Topper?" he thought, and at the end of the act the question was answered.
"Hellow there!" Topper said, coming up to him in the lobby. "I don't mind your taking out my wife's maid old man, but I wish to goodness you'd ask her to wear her own frocks."

My Ford.
The Ford is my chariot.
I shall not want.
It maketh me lie down in wet places.

It destroyeth my soul.
It leadeth me into the deep waters.
It leadeth me into the paths of ridicule for its name's sake.

It preparath a breakdown for me in the presence of mine enemies.
I will fear more evil when it's with me.
Its rods and its shafts discomfort me.
It annoyeth my face with oil.
Its water bolleth over.
Surely to goodness, if Lizzie follow me all the days of my life,
I shall dwell in the house of Nuts forever.—Exchange.

T. H. Goynes.

When one reads of Trotsky, the people's friend, riding about in luxurious trains and automobiles the thought occurs that demagogues, given power, act alike in every language. When a politician who professes to be lying awake nights worrying about the people gets a chance to hand the people something, he certainly takes advantage of all his opportunities.

Democratic National Chairman Cummings is much peeved over the appointment of a committee to consider planks for a Republican platform. Unfortunately the Republican party hasn't a committee of one to resume all the responsibility in matters of this kind.

At his recent birthday banquet Col. Bryan felicitated himself upon the fact that all the great reforms he has advocated have been adopted. There, for instance, is the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one without awaiting the advice or consent of any other nation whatsoever.

The Turks act as if they had never read the fourteen points which were told by the administration press agents had changed their sinful natures.

The Democratic politicians and organs are now busy cursing the Republican Congress because it can't stop the extravagance of the administration or pay its big bills without levying taxes.

Attorney General Palmer's scheme of stopping the high cost of living by talking it to death seems to be working about like all the administration remedies for what ails us.
