

The Edison sings at its work—and so will you!

You expend absolutely no effort, except to guide the material under the flying needle. The low, musical hum of the motor and mechanism of the Edison Electric Sewing Machine does not interfere with pleasant chatter, on an afternoon spent in agreeable company with profitable employment. The discussion of important details of dressmaking is not drowned or made difficult. You are not annoyed with bobbins that "give out," or shuttles that catch the thread. You simply release the imprisoned power of the motor, and at whatever speed you may desire, from one to one thousand stitches a minute, your EDISON turns out smooth, even seams, neat tucks, stitchings of every sort—with the utmost precision and ease.

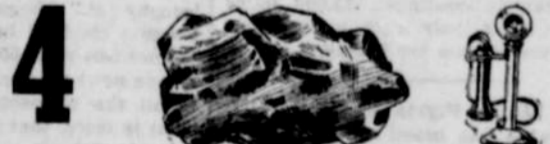

It's easily possible for you to own this sewing machine at once! Ask about terms.

Women No Longer Free to Attend Dances.

There have been considerable misunderstandings in regard to whether woman who attend dances can be admitted free. The Treasury Department ruled that they must be taxed, as the following letter will show:
Treasury Department, Washington, Sept 19, 1919.
Collector of Internal Revenue.
Portland, Oregon.

In reply to your letter of Sept. 10, 1919, you are advised when gentlemen are required to pay a charge of $1.00 for admission to a dance and all ladies are admitted free, whether or not accompanied by a gentleman, tax of 10c must be collected from each lady admitted as well as each gentleman.

The provisions of Example 9, Article 23, of the regulations holding that ladies admitted at reduced rates must pay tax on the full admission charge, apply with equal force when ladies admitted free.

James M. Baker,
Deputy Commissioner.

Bob and His Pants.

Listen, my children and you shall hear, how a brave cavalier—
One Bob Leonard—renowned far and near; how he journeyed far, Alas! too far, my dear, without—his lance?
Ah! no, my dear without his pants!

Well that's awful, and we think we had better quit verifying before we get run in, but no matter how sad 'tis, 'tis true never the less. Thursday morning, before the break o' day Bob Leonard and Mrs. Leonard and two kiddies started to Pendleton via Portland, in their car, and when they had traveled far, to Portland in fact, Mr. Leonard found that he had neglected to remove his trousers from the closet at home, and that they still hung there peacefully. Well, what was the poor man to do? He simply had to have those pants! The first thing we knew about it was that one of the friends of the family received a long distance call, telling him to entrust the conductor of the S. P. with the precious pants and he the conductor, would deliver them to the bereft owner. That all sounds very clever, but, suppose the train had been held up on the way, and train robber had been adly in need of them, what would Mr. Leonard have done then, and what we would like to know is this, what did he wear as far as Portland?

The Gas Meeting

A meeting was called by several of the leading citizens last Friday, and held at the City Hall, the purpose of which was to discuss the gasoline shortage and, if possible, to suggest some means of relieving it. Atty. Joe Mann acted as chairman, and E. R. Beals suggested that a committee of three be appointed to investigate the affair and to make a report at a later meeting. This was done, F. R. Beals, and C. J. Edwards being appointed and having the power to choose a third member, which was R. B. Miller, of the Sunset and Tillamook garages.

Howard Boone and another member of the Standard Oil force spoke briefly, saying that the shortage was caused by lack of production, and that the surplus had been exhausted. E. F. Rogers and R. B. Miller went out to Portland last week to investigate the conditions in that city, and were unable to get any first hand information, as the Standard Oil Co. does not make a practise of letting its employees know its business. Mr. Rogers says that the situation out there is very bad, and that there are no indications of immediate relief.

Several others also spoke about the situation, including: F. R. Beals, R. B. Miller, Chas. F. Fankow and John Carroll.

It was stated that there would be only twenty thousand gallons of gas available for Tillamook county for the entire month of June, which is only one third of the amount that is generally consumed, therefore all pleasure cars will be stopped and the County Road Department has promised to use as little as possible in its work. It was also stated that there were seventeen different uses for the gasoline in the county, such as milking machines, wood saws, fishing boats, etc., that would have to be cut down on. That will cause several industries to slow down unless there is a good substitute discovered.

On the whole there is little that can be accomplished by the people, except to save what gas they can get.

Tillamook's Ten Commandments.

9th Commandment, School Teachers.
Thou shalt not forget that the work of the school teacher is the most important in the whole community. When children arrive at that peculiar age when they become little animated question marks, this indicates that they are ripe for the school teacher. Yes, it is generally supposed that the teacher then pours into their hungry minds homopathic doses of wisdom best suited to their tender years.

Verily the teacher is expected to impart oceans of pure knowledge into the growing minds; also etiquette, discipline, agriculture, music, drawing, manual training, calisthenics, forestry, civics, chess making, domestic science, plain and fancy crocheting, deep breathing, horticulture, deportment, table manners, folk dancing, harmless flirtation and athletics.

Surely you would suppose that the parents would frequently visit the school to see if the teacher was doing a good job on their offsprings, but strange to say this is not the case.

But sometimes the pupils feel that the teacher is very partial because the compliments are so unevenly distributed. Verily the teachers are expected to make study very attractive by sandwiching it in between halves of play.

Remember the teachers task is the mental and physical development of the child. In our scheme of public education verily the soul has been left in ignorance. So small is the attention given to this department that we seriously doubt if we have such a possession. Yet character depends upon soul culture for personality and soul are the same.
