

The CHENEY

A Mirror to Harmony

The Cheney Orchestra Chambers

Built with flat instead of curved walls, so as to reflect sound waves without distortion.

False vibrations are thus eliminated and tones assume unusual musical purity.

The most beautiful painting cannot rival the wealth of detail reflected in a perfectly flat mirror. So, with The Cheney, every rich detail of harmony is faithfully reflected by plane-surfaced tone chambers.

Each delicate shading of tones, high, medium and low, is blended with mellow overtones. The Cheney reveals new beauties in all records. The art of old-world furniture designers is also reflected in the craftsmanlike finish of Cheney cabinets.

What the Editors Say

Steuenville (O.) Herald-Star: "While Mr. Wilson was Governor of New Jersey he induced the legislature to pass what became known as the 'Seven Sisters' laws, being intended to hamper the operations of corporations as much as possible. Since then the state has been trying to get rid of these barnacles by repeal or amendment, until during the month of April the last of the original acts was struck from the statute books. The rule of common sense has been thus restored."

According to the report of the Russell Sage Foundation, which we are afraid is only too true, the public schools of the United States show, in attendance of pupils, training, progress efficiency of only 52 per cent. Not one State shows more than 75.5 per cent, while New York and other great States are scarcely above the average, if not below it. A profitable topic for discussion in commencement day addresses would be, Can 52 per cent Schools Produce 100 per cent Americans?—Harvey's Weekly.

Chicago Tribune: "The railroads declare they need 226,000 new freight cars to meet the demand for transportation equipment. Had the federal railroad administration lived up to its moral obligation to return the roads in as good condition as when they were taken over there would be no such car shortage now. But the unprecedented strain put upon the rolling stock by the war was not compensated by replacements, and the public is now paying the cost. When our transportation system has merged from the slough into which it was plunged by government operation the country will witness a return to normal conditions once more."

Harrisburgh (Pa.) Telegraph: "As was to be expected, President Wilson vetoed the Knox peace resolution. It is doubtful if Senator Knox or anybody else familiar with the situation believed he would do otherwise. Indeed, the purpose of many Republicans in voting for the resolution was to bring the President before the people clearly as the one man who has stood four-square against taking the United States out of the war on any terms of his own terms. The large majority of Republicans and not a few Democrats stood ready to accept an Americanized treaty and league of nations plan. The President flatly told them that unless they voted precisely as he willed, without the crossing of a t or the dotting of an i, he would not accept the treaty. He has proved to be as stubborn and as headstrong as he threatened to be. Then having prevented the adoption of a treaty that would have protected American rights he proceeded to blame the Republicans in Congress for continuing the nation in a state of war. That is where the Knox resolution came in. Its veto puts the President in a position where he must make a campaign issue of the treaty, and the Republican party is not afraid of making a fight on that question. It stands ready to give the people a treaty and a league that will safeguard America and at the same time put us at peace with the rest of the world on a basis that will be satisfactory both to us and to our allies in the war. The President's party must stand or fall on an unreserved, un-American treaty and league plan."

Tossing Away a Billion Dollars in Sugar.

The London Times reports that large shipment consignments of sugar are being shipped from Great Britain to the United States, and that some of these shipments had recently arrived from the West Indies.

The American buyers will pay not only for the double freight rate from Cuba to England and England to the United States, but for the double handling charges and the large profits made by British buyers who were more sagacious than our own government.

The American people will be mulcted out of approximately a billion dollars this year by the double blundering of our government. The first blunder was Attorney General Palmer's permission to the Louisiana growers to sell their crop at 17 and 18 cents a pound.

The second blunder was the government's refusal to buy the Cuban crop, which was offered it at 6 1/2 cents a pound. The present outrageous price of sugar traces unerringly back to the attorney general's action in helping the Louisiana growers to get a fat price.

But another than the true reason had to be found, so it was argued in a White House statement of last January 3 that there was no need to buy the Cuban crop. "President Wilson," said an Associated Press Washington dispatch of that date, "has decided not to exercise the powers conferred in the McNary sugar control bill authorizing the purchase and distribution of the sugar crop, according to a statement issued tonight at the White House." The White House statement went into a long argument that there would be an abundant supply without the Cuban crop.

There is no higher authority on these matters than Mr. Hoover, and he testified recently before the house investigating committee that purchase of the Cuban crop last July would have given the people 12 1/2-cent sugar, instead of the 25 to 30 cent sugar they now must buy.

It is easy accurately to calculate what these blunders have cost the American people this year. In round numbers the country consumes 100 pounds of sugar per capita every year, a grand total of 10,000,000,000 pounds. Each cent added to the price per pound means an additional national sugar bill of $100,000,000. If instead of 12 1/2-cent sugar the people must pay 25 cents, the difference will amount to $1,250,000,000. If some allowance be made for prospective lower prices before the year is through, the country's loss, as computed by authorities on this subject, will still be approximately $1,000,000,000.

Notwithstanding these sky-rocketing times, a billion dollars is a lot of money. It would construct several great irrigation projects of the magnitude of the Columbia basin enterprise. It would, in fact, on the basis of existing high costs reclaim half the arid lands of the west for which water is available.—Spokesman Review.

Coaxing You to Smile.

Things That Count.

Contractor—"A house on this plan can be built for $6,000."
The Other Man—"I have no doubt it can. What I want know is how much I'll have to pay you when it's built?"

A Cure By Proxy.

"Doctor," said he, "I'm a victim of insomnia. I can't sleep if there's the least noise, such as a cat on the back fence, for instance."
"This powder will be effective," replied the physician, after compounding a prescription.

A Short-Haired Jolt

The short-haired women and long-haired men in Nodaway County, Mo., have taken up the Demon Tobacco as the next victim of prohibition. One of the sisters approached Elder Johnson, a pillar of the church, and asked his support in the fight against tobacco.

And this was Elder Johnson's reply, as printed in the Nodaway county Democrat-Forum:

"A man can smoke and still be a good Christian. Universal smoking would do more toward bringing about universal brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God era on earth than all the spasms of short-haired women and long-haired men reformers in the world. Do I believe in smoking? Most assuredly! Let us pray!"

She Tried to Please

The mistress of the house engaged a new servant and gave her instructions how to behave when answering her bell. That evening she rang for a glass of milk and was surprised to see Martha appear with the glass praped in her hand.

"Oh, Martha," she said, "always bring the milk to me on a tray."
Martha apologized and promised to remember in the future. The next evening the bell rang and the same request was made. This time Martha appeared with the tray and the milk emptied into it. Anxious to please, she curtseied and inquired:
"Shall I bring a spoon, ma'am, or will you sup it up?"

A Fellow Feeling.

A Humane society secured a downtown shop window and filled it with attractive pictures of wild animals in their native haunts. A placard in the middle of the exhibit read: "We were skinned to provide women with fashionable furs."

A man paused before the window and his harassed expression for a moment gave place to one of sympathy. "I know just how you feel, old tops," he muttered. "So was I."

A Startling Request.

After working on a woman who had an extravagant coiffure to impede his progress and handicap his manipulations, Dr. Pullen (right name withheld by advertising department) sighed his relief and motioned for her to arise.

The woman pulled herself together, looked into a mirror, and then again seated herself in the chair.
"I am all through with your teeth," the dentist told her.

"I know," the woman answered, "but aren't you going to fix up my hair?"

A Bird in the Cat.

What we call thrift in ourselves is sometimes stinginess in others. But, cheer up, thrifty ones! The record in meanness is well established by the lady who called at the local shop in a country village and gave a small-very-small-order for goods, including a ha-p-orth of cat's meat.

The shopkeeper was muttering angry words to himself half an hour later as he made up the order, when a flouried and breathless maid-servant dashed into the place.

"H-h-have you sent off Mrs. Grableigh's things yet?" she gasped.
"Just doing 'em," snapped the grocer, as he struggled with a sea of parcels.

"Oh, thank goodness!" gasped the girl. "Then don't send the cat's meat. The cat's just caught a sparrow!"

One Never Can Tell

In New England there was a man who would never admit himself on any question. Time and time again attempts were made to compel him to take a stand, but to no avail. One day two of his friends decided to make another attempt.

"Bill," said one of the men in the non-committal man's presence, "a traveller told me that he once saw a buffalo climb twenty feet into a tree to get some grapes."
"What's that?" exclaimed the other. "A buffalo climb a tree! Say, Jim," he continued, turning to the non-committal one, "what do you think of a story like that?"
"I don't know," replied Jim, "but there's no telling what a buffalo might do if he wanted grapes."
