

A BANKBOOK IN EVERY HOME.

If we can achieve that result the First National bank will feel that it has accomplished the biggest bank result possible.

But in many Tillamook households you will find several of our bankbooks, representing the accounts of men, women and children.

Those people appreciate what it means to have "Nationalized" accounts.

FAMOUS OLD ENGLISH "PUBS"

Houses of Entertainment That Have Been Popular in the Little Isle for Centuries.

If the prohibitionists get their way, and close all the pubs in town and country, some long histories will reach a sudden close, remarks a writer in London Answers. It is a toss-up which is the oldest public house in England. The Trip to Jerusalem, at Nottingham, claims to be. It has perhaps survived, because it is hewn out of the rock below the castle. If a name is any guide, it apparently commemorates the Crusades, and Richard the Lion Heart is said to have drunk ale there in 1189. That seems old enough for anything.

Still, there is The Fighting Cocks, at St. Albans, which can assuredly point back to 1250. Prior to that, it was the Monk's Fishing House. It is octagonal in shape, and its ceilings are not six feet high. Altogether a notable old pub.

Nobody ought to go to Gloucester without seeing the Cathedral first and the New Inn second. The New Inn is one of the oldest inns in the country, and one of the most picturesque and best preserved.

The Seven Stars, at Manchester, is another old place, and so is the Rose and Crown at Balmbridge, in Wensleydale. Probably this was the first Rose and Crown, which refers to the Tudor Rose, and it has been very extensively copied, for in the neighborhood of London alone, there must be a dozen of that name.

BOBBY'S MEMORY ALSO GOOD

In the Matter of Quoting Proverbs Small Boy May Be Said to Have Scored on Uncle.

Old Uncle Arthur was visiting his niece in the city. And he was much given to the repeating of proverbs, especially to small Bobby on his committing any misdemeanor. Now Uncle Arthur himself was not free of vices and Bobby certainly hoped that some day something would give a chance to retort at his great uncle. Finally his chance came.

The family was at the dinner table when Bobby arrived home from school. Being very hungry he rushed straight to the table. The first thing Uncle Arthur did was to give him a long searching look, which showed him the dirty little hands Bobby had neglected to wash. "Bobby," he began impressively, "I see you've forgotten that old proverb which says: 'Cleanliness is next to godliness.'"

The family looked embarrassed. But not Uncle Arthur. He felt that he had done his duty and he majestically lifted his cup of coffee and took a long loud gulp of that beverage. That gulp brought Bobby his chance. "Yes, I had forgotten that one, Uncle Arthur," he said sweetly, "but I remembered the one that said 'Drink slowly and distinctly.'"

Even Uncle Arthur was too much surprised to tell Bob that he had made a slight mistake in the quotation. But they all did think it mighty fitting.

Need for Figures.

A favorite Madison square argument from the soapbox is to hold up a hat and yell:

"I paid $3 for this hat; the man who made it got 24 cents. The employer got $2.76. What are you going to do about it?"

Now, the manufacturer of that hat knows that he rarely gets half as much as the worker got; he also knows that the speaker neglects the cost of the raw material, the cost of preparing the material, the cost of transportation, and the cost of selling—all of which involve labor; that also he and every one who handles either the material or the finished hat, have to pay rent and taxes. But instead of pointing in figures, that employer is more than likely to suggest that more Americanization is needed and would like to have some one play the "Star-Spangled Banner!"

—Samuel Crowther, in World's Work.

Jerusalem's Water Supply.

"Practically every house in Jerusalem has its own rainwater cistern, and it has been estimated that if all these cisterns were full they would contain 800,000,000 gallons." Captain Carson of the British army of occupation reports, "Before a cistern is now filled with pure water the owner must obtain a certificate from the newly organized health department that his cistern has been rendered sanitary and mosquito-proof. He is then given enough water to fill his cistern, through a temporary pipe line. The organized effort to supply pure water to the 50,000 residents of Jerusalem has enabled them to have ten times more water than formerly."

Not What He Meant.

A small choir were practicing the well-known anthem, "As the hart pants after the water brooks." The rendering of the open stages was apparently not quite to the satisfaction of the gentleman who wielded the baton.

He considered it necessary, therefore, to tender some advice to the tenors, and caused great consternation and not a little embarrassment among his little flock by the following announcement:

"Gentlemen, your expression is simply splendid, but the tone is very poor—really, your pants are far too long."—London Ideas.

Looking for Trouble.

"Can't the lady find what she wants?" asked the floorwalker.

"I think she came in here to find fault."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GOT OVER THE DIFFICULTY

Chaplain Evidently Found Some Way to Get Around the Regulations of the Navy.

In June, 1911, writes Dr. Maurice F. Egan in his book, "Ten Years Near the German Frontier," the Atlantic squadron stopped at Denmark on its way to Germany. One day the quarry who had been appointed to look after the admiral and his immediate suite came to me in great perplexity. It was shortly after one of the receptions given by the American officers. He held in his hand a little box.

"I am in difficulty," he said, "and I have come to ask you to help me. His majesty has received several letters from the American sailors, and there is one that especially amused him. It seems that he pressed the men by asking for the Scandinavians in your navy. A sailor who addresses him as 'Dear King' thanks him for this and declares that the men like Copenhagen so much that they beg his majesty to induce the admiral to stay a few days longer. Of course his majesty cannot do that, but he has asked me to give the little medal in this box to the sailor. I am told that it is against the rules, which seem to be very strict, yet I really cannot tell the king that I have not given the medal to the worthy sailor. You know the king's kindness of heart. I am at my wit's end, so I appeal to you."

"It is easy enough," I said. "When in a quandary of this kind call in the church."

We found the chaplain, and Frederick VIII received a grateful note, addressed, "Dear King."

BIG SPIDER WRONGLY NAMED

Insect Found in the Southwestern States and in Mexico Not Really a Tarantula.

The famous tarantula, sometimes represented as one of the terrors of the arid portions of the Southwestern states and northern Mexico, is not really, it seems, the tarantula of history and of fable.

An eminent authority in such matters, in remarking that the tarantula is a spider, says of that terrifying creature that it is the Lycosa Tarantula, a species of spider found in some of the warmer parts of Italy and Spain. When full grown it is about the size of a chestnut and of a brown color. Its bite was at one time supposed to be dangerous and to induce a kind of "dancing disease," but now it is known not to be worse than the sting of a common wasp.

It is an old fable, extending to remotest times, that the bite of this spider would produce epilepsy or a strange dancing mania in its victims, and that this epilepsy or madness could be relieved only by a particular kind of music. The tarantula of Italy and Spain—and it is found in those countries today—has hairy legs with black markings on them.

It is very likely that when the early Spanish explorers came upon the great spider of the Southwest, and seeing a good deal of resemblance to the tarantula of the Old World, those explorers, not being entomologists, called the new spider a tarantula. And the name has persisted.

Earthquake Peculiarities.

A peculiar feature of earthquakes is that they seem to undulate the ground with a twisting motion. This effect is quite noticeable in almost every Central American or southern Mexican quake, the straight rows of trees are shifted into irregular zigzags or light buildings twisted about on their foundations, and many odd effects are created in this manner. Statistics tend to show that the maximum of earthquake disturbances occurs in the northern hemisphere during the months of January, August and October, with a minimum during May, June and July. The southern hemisphere's period of greatest activity is November, May and June, while the minimum is in March and August. It will be noted from the above that the period of greatest activity is during the cool months, and although this may not appear to be true in regard to the Southern hemisphere, it must be remembered that its seasons are just the reverse of ours in the northern hemisphere.

First Transcontinental Railroad.

The completion of the first railway which made it possible to go by rail from the Atlantic to the Pacific was celebrated on May 10, 1869, when a gold spike was driven to commemorate the joining of the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific at Promontory, Utah. The scene was depicted by Bret Harte in a poem which is preserved for the future by a massive painting which had wide popularity. The similar last spike of the Northern Pacific was driven September 8, 1883, near the mouth of Gold creek in Montana. On the earlier road the first through car from the Pacific reached New York on July 24, 1870.

Motor as Rival of Camel.

The camel replaces the motor truck for general hauling in Asia Minor. By this means twelve miles a day is traversed, but where the camel "has it on" the motor truck is in the upkick. The camel needs nothing but the few weeds and blades of grass he can pick from along the roadside. The great difficulty with the animal as a mode of transportation is that all articles shipped by camel must be of a nature that they can stand a long journey without spoiling.

Then why isn't everybody's house wired?

Simply because some people are afraid of the man who does the wiring—and are afraid of the bill that will follow.

Let us talk these matters over beforehand—tell you of the economy of housewiring—and show you how simple it is to do the work without the slightest inconvenience to you.

We'll give you an honest estimate for honest work. A phone or postal will bring our representatives to talk it over with you. Both Phones.

Why Brunswick Tires Win Preference

There are two main reasons—one, the name itself, which certifies superfine value—the other, that time tells the same story.

Thus reputation and performance unite in giving you all you expect—and more.

Yet Brunswicks cost no more than like-type tires. Many motorists would pay more readily, but the Brunswick idea is to GIVE the utmost, rather than to GET the utmost. And this has been true since 1845. You can appreciate what Brunswick Standards mean by trying ONE Brunswick Tire. It will be a revelation. You'll agree that you could not buy a better, regardless of price.

And, like other motorists, you'll decide to have ALL Brunswicks. Then you'll know supreme satisfaction from your tires—longer life, minimum trouble, lower cost.

Rather Non-Committal.

For non-committal brevity of speech commend us, if you please, to the Yankee lord of the soil. One such, who was recently making a visit to the city was knocked down in the street by an automobile.

A sympathizing crowd instantly surrounded him, with condolences and questions.

"Are you hurt, my friend?" kindly asked a gentleman who was first among the resuers, as he helped the sufferer to his feet and brushed the mud and dust from his clothes.

"Well," came the cautious reply, "it ain't done me no good."

Yet His Business Pays

Two travelers met in the smoking room of a hotel and at once commenced talking shop.

"How's business? Getting many orders?" asked the stout man.

"More than I can handle," said the short man. "How is it with you? Had any orders lately?"

"Well business is pretty good," said the stout man. "I haven't had an order for a year and half, but expect to get next spring."

At this point the curiosity of a bystander got the best of him. Calling the short man aside he asked: "Who's your stout friend?"

"A traveler," was the brief reply.

"Well, he certainly has puzzled me. What's his line?"

"Suspension bridges."

He Found Variety

Sitting in the shadow of a vine-screened veranda, where only small spots of moonlight occasionally fell, was Edythe May. Close beside her was John Henry.

"John," remarked the fair one after a sound that might have been either kissing or swatting mosquitoes "there is something that I want you to explain to me."

"All right, dearest," cheerfully assented John Henry. "What is it?"

"Why is it," responded Edythe May, "that you frequently say you like me all the more because I am so changeable?"

"Because, dear one," explained John Henry, "every time I kiss you it is I'm kissing another girl."
