Coaxing You to Smile.

Pure English.

She was apparently a lady of refinement. She had all the hallmarks of the select. Her clothing was faultless and there was a look of keen intellectuality in her face. With her was a beautiful little boy—not exactly a Little Lord Fauntleroy, but a little chap with big eyes and a wealth of tousled hair.

I noticed them, the lady for her dignified bearing and the boy for his bright face, as I sat down just in front of them on the suburban train. Pretty soon I heard the little boy say, evidently referring to me:

No reply.
"Ain't that a funny hat that man has got on? Ain't it an old hat Mom?"

No reply.
"Ain't it funny when a man has got a boil on the back of his neck, Mom, ain't it?" (We happened to have one that morning.)

No reply.
"Ain't there nothing to do about boils on the back of the neck, Mom, ain't there?"
"Shut up!" came the voice of the lady. "If you use that word 'ain't' again I am going to soak you on the bugle, now take it from me. How often have I got to tell you not to use that word 'ain't'?"

Free Speeches.

William Lyon Phelps, professor of English literature at Yale, declares he gets credit for only 25 per cent of the after-dinner speeches he actually makes. "Every time I accept an invitation to speak, I really make four addresses. First, is the speech I prepare in advance. That is pretty good. Second, is the speech I really make. Third, is the speech I make on the way home, which is the best of all: and fourth, is the speech the newspapers next morning say I made, which bears no relation to any of the others."

Didn't Want Waste 'Em.

The fishing season is on. A business man was reminded of it by a small son who called him on the phone and asked:

"Daddy, will you bring home some goldfish?"

"Why?" the man asked.

"Well," answered the boy, "I've got a couple of worms and don't know what to do with 'em."

Appreciation.

"I admire your latest volume of verses very much indeed!"

"Oh, yes?" replied the Imaginist.

"Yes, particularly the first one in the book. Let me recite it to you to prove how I have been enthused over it sufficiently to learn it by heart:

"When I give you toy balloons There is no other Fire out of amethyst—"

"Wait!" cried the Imaginist. But the enthusiast would not wait:

"Green beetles on Fifth Avenue; Skies that be;

"A soft mist hides the sea—"

"Stop!" yelled the Imaginist. "That's not a poem. You have been reciting the table of contents!"

All Titled.

The doctor's family had just moved into a more exclusive residence district and all the members were given to boasting over this. Even the 9-year-old daughter told of it to her small playmates at school. "Why, it's just like having a title," she ended. "Everything that comes to our place has written on it after our 'Collet Place.'"

Another little 9-year-old sniffed disdainfully. "Oh, it that is what you mean, we've got one too," she informed the audience, "and it's almost like your'n. Right after our names on everything that comes to our house they write, 'Collect, please.'"

Getting Even.

"Here is a charge for a call lasting half an hour on our telephone," said the lawyer to his wife.

"Yes, dear. That was my call. I was asking a friend of mine a question," replied the wife.

"And did it take an hour to ask a question?"

"Yes, dear. You see, it was one of those hypothetical questions."

U. S. Sugar Imports Show Billion Increase in Past Fiscal Year

Imports of sugar into the United States during the fiscal year 1920 exceeded exports by more than 6,000,000 pounds, according to a summary of the country's foreign trade in sugar at the Department of Commerce, and amounted to 7,587,195,000 pounds.

Sugar exported for the year amounted to 1,444,030,665 pounds, an advance of more than 300,000,000 pounds over 1919.

France took 698,798,020 pounds of the sugar exported in 1920 and Great Britain received 362,236,359 pounds. Cuba, with a total of 6,965,799,612 pounds, supplied the major part of the imports for the year. Imports from Cuba increased by more than 1,000,000,000 pounds over the 1919 total.

A considerable quantity of the Cuban imports and the exports to Great Britain, however, officials of the department explained, is made up of British-owned sugar which is brought into this country raw and refined before shipment to England.

If you don't believe that the state of Ohio is on fire for the Democratic national ticket, just contemplate the fact that at the recent state primary twenty per cent of the normal Democratic vote and sixty percent of the normal Republican vote turned out.

President Wilson has decided to sell the sheep that have been grazing on the White House grounds. A Republican administration, he realizes, will not need to raise wool to pull over the people's eyes.

The Straws Show.

The Diamond Silk Company, a New York firm with plant at Paterson, N. J., has gone into the hands of a receiver by order of the U. S. District Court. Depression in the silk market is given as the reason. Imports of manufactures of silk for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920, nearly $90,000,000 in value, compared with $27,000,000 the last year under the protective tariff law, 1913. From Japan alone come about $45,000,000 worth of silk fabrics woven in the piece during 1920, the product of the cheapest labor known. These importations are closing American factories, but they have not reduced the price of silk garments to the consumer. The straws are beginning to betray the direction of the tariff wind.

Wm. Jennings Bryan and Gov. Cox

(From the Philadelphia Inquirer.)

An esteemed local contemporary which engages in daily tirades against Senator Harding has come to the conclusion that William Jennings Bryan is going to do "his part" in the election of Governor Cox to the Presidency. Being a good Democrat, it says, he will turn in for his party. The Commenter is patronizingly patted on the shoulder for the "good work" he did for President Wilson in the 1912 and 1916 campaigns, and we are led to infer that he may be expected to do equally effective talking for the Democratic candidate this year.

It happens that Mr. Bryan is alive, and in good health, and quite competent to speak for himself. Whatever else may be said about the "peerless leader" of his party no one can accuse him of ambiguity. He has placed himself upon record concerning Governor Cox. He did so just on the eve of the San Francisco convention. For the sake of historical accuracy we propose to reprint that portion of his statement dealing with the man who is now the Democratic nominee for the Presidency. Here it is:

"After disgracing his State, he aspires to a position in which he could disgrace the nation. For years the men engaged in the liquor business have been the real anarchists of the country, far more dangerous than the professional anarchists. Governor Cox has become their candidate.

"His nomination would make the Democratic party the leader of the lawless element of the country, and his election, if such a thing were possible, would turn the White House over to those who defy the government and hold law in contempt."

If this is the kind of "good work" the Cox men want Bryan to do for the candidate we fear that they have already given up the election. None of the political opponents of the Democratic nominee has said anything half as severe about him. For that reason the Bryan judgment cannot be dismissed as partisan tirade. It comes from the man who was the national standard-bearer of his party in three Presidential campaigns. It comes from the man who received more than six million Democratic votes on each of the occasions when he was candidate. It comes from the man who was responsible for the nomination of Woodrow Wilson and who helped to elect him. It comes from the man who was Secretary of State in a Democratic administration, and who confesses that he was heart-broken over the nomination of Cox.

Mr. Bryan says that Cox is the choice of the disreputable element of the Democratic party and that he has "fairly won the dishonor" which has been conferred upon him. The rabid partisans do not ask much from the Commenter. They suggest merely that he eat his words and turn in and help place Cox in the White House. Will he do it? Well, he says that he has not yet decided how he is going to vote. If the Cox men can get any comfort out of that they are entitled to it. And no matter what Mr. Bryan may do or say in the future his original characterization of the Democratic candidate will remain as part of the political history of the country.

Governor Cox says the Republicans are raising a fifteen million dollar campaign fund. The other day Franklin Roosevelt said it was thirty millions. If these gentlemen must romance, why not get together and agree on a story?

STURDILY built—designed for power and dependability, possessing grace and beauty in every line—the new Buick Nineteen Twenty One series signally upholds the traditions that have made the name Buick a notable word in the automotive industry.

Two decades have more than justified the unwavering fidelity to the accepted engineering ideals to which Buick stands committed. The same rugged Valve-in-Head motor refined is a distinguishing feature of every model.

In appearance, the Buick Nineteen Twenty One series is notable for the harmonious blending of low, graceful body lines; in appointments, for those added refinements that so materially increase the pleasure and comfort of motoring.

In addition to the general features of the new models the Buick Five-Passenger Touring Car (Twenty One Forty Five) possesses a roominess of tonneau and new arrangement of seating that afford occupants the utmost in riding comfort. For the business man or his family; for the needs of city driving or country driving, this model excels because of its capacity for varied service.
