

Live Stock Prize Winners at the Fair.

The Stock Show at the 1920 Tillamook County Fair was, by far, the best ever held in the county. There were over 200 head of registered dairy cattle entered in the show which is about three times as many as there were in the county in 1913, when the first County Fair was held. The management had added to the barns in anticipation of a large show and even then the stalls were crowded.

The Jersey men had out the largest number, over 100 head, the Guernsey men next with 60 head and the Holstein men, 50 head. The quality shown in most of the classes was excellent and would be a credit to any State Fair in the country.

It was, without doubt, the largest exhibit of dairy cattle at any County Fair in the Northwest.

The winnings in the cattle classes were as follows:

The Swine Show was not so large but the quality of the offerings was excellent. Joe Donaldson won the first in the Chester White Division, with A. B. Wood of Dolph a close second. Paul Fitzpatrick had some very likely Berkshire youngsters and the Durocs and the Chester Whites were represented in the Pig Club class.

TILLAMOOK WEALTH GAINS

Cheese Production Averages $200 Per Capita.

(Oregonian)

Tillamook county is one of the most prosperous sections on the face of the earth, according to Representative McArthur, who was at the annual county fair at Tillamook city last week.

"Tillamook is on the map," said Mr. McArthur yesterday. "It is a great dairy country and also has other important resources. The prosperity of the county is shown by the record of more than $2,000,000 worth of cheese last year.

"This is an average of more than $200 for every man, woman and child in the county. Logging and lumbering are likewise important industries and I was much interested in going over the new mill of the Whitney company at Garibaldi. This mill, when completed, will be one of the largest and most modern sawmills in Oregon. It is connected with the Whitney company's timber on Kilechis river by a standard-gauge logging road. The properties are being operated by Russell Hawkins, part owner and resident manager of the Whitney company.

TWO POLITICAL TALKS AT THE COUNTY FAIR

Congressman "Pat" McArthur and Robert N. Stanfield the Speakers

As a number of persons requested that they would like to hear Congressman McArthur and Robert N. Stanfield, republican candidate for U. S. Senator, speak on the issues of the day, an opportunity was offered them at the Fair grounds after the usual program through on Thursday evening.

Mr. Stanfield, who has been a successful sheep and wool man of Eastern Oregon, was the first speaker. He said he was highly delighted with his visit to Tillamook county and to come in touch with the dairymen, who had been so successful in that industry. He had heard a great deal about Tillamook and the splendid cooperative spirit that prevailed here. He contrasted the difference between Western and Eastern Oregon, stating that in the latter part of the state their interests were reclamation and irrigation of the land. Mr. Stanfield then discussed the Wilson covenant and stated that he was opposed to having the question of war delegated to some foreign body, and was opposed to that body having the right to send our boys into some other country to fight. Mr. Stanfield then took up the question of tariff, being opposed to the free trade policy of the democratic government.

Congressman McArthur first dwelt on our system of constitutional government and sharply criticized Mr. Wilson and the democratic party for departing from it and adopting socialistic ideas. "What the country wants right now," he said "was to get back to constitutional government, and away from the autocratic rule of Woodrow Wilson." This he claimed, would be done if the republicans were returned to power in November. By the time that he reached the question of Wilson's covenant, "Pat" McArthur was warmed up and he denounced the covenant, contending that it was not wise for the United States to get into entangling alliances with European countries. And as to Article 10, he like Mr. Stanfield, was opposed to sending our boys to other countries to fight. He was in favor of some agreement with European powers to settle disputes between different nations but was not in favor of Wilson's league covenant, which he denounced, for he contended that it was the right and duty of the Senate of the United States to say whether this country went to war and not some foreign body, which seemed to meet with the hearty approval of the audience. Then "Pat" delved into the tariff question and he laid the democratic party for its free trade policy. He contrasted the difference between the Southern and Northern States. In the South most of their products is protected by the Underwood tariff law, while in the Northern States most everything raised or manufactured here is under free trade. "Pat" told his hearers if they wanted protection for sugar, peanuts, etc., to benefit the Southern States; and free butter, cheese, Chinese eggs, wool, lumber and a great many other things raised here, they should vote for the democratic candidate for president." He then made reference to the dairy industry, and told the dairymen if they wanted their industry protected from foreign competition they would have to look to the republican party to bring this about. "Pat" took a shot at candidate Cox for his false accusation about the republicans raising slush fund to buy the presidency. One day candidate Cox said it was $8,000,000, next day it was $15,000,000 and a day later it was $30,000,000. The speaker did not know whether Candidate Cox would double that amount, but there was one thing sure the Senate investigation committee found that Candidate Cox was not telling the truth about the alleged slush fund, and that the democratic candidate throwing mud with the hope of avoiding the main issues of the campaign. "Pat" caused some little amusement when he told what kind of a campaign the democrats were pulling off in the large cities passing it around: "Vote for Jimmy and you'll get your booze back," was what they were whispering around in East. This was done for the purpose of deciding the voters like "he kept us out of war", for, as the congressman plainly pointed out, to repeal the prohibition amendment the same procedure would have to be gone through as when the amendment was passed.

Another part of "Pat's" address appeared to interest his audience. It was in regard to Robert N. Stanfield, the republican nominee for U. S. Senator. He made a plea that all three branches of the government be under the control of the republicans. He contended that there was no doubt whatever that Mr. Harding would be the next president and Oregon should send a republican to the U. S. Senate to help Mr. Harding straighten out the mix up that the democrats had got the country into. He did not think that Tillamook people were so short sighted to vote for a republican president and then vote for a democrat for U. S. Senator. He strongly urged the people of Tillamook to vote for Robert N. Stanfield.
