The Political Campaign Is Started in State.

William Lloyd Harding, governor of Iowa, opened the republican national campaign in Portland last Saturday when he addressed a large and enthusiastic audience at the auditorium. Governor Harding discussed the league of nations, the tariff, the wastefulness of the democratic administration, urged the election of a republican to the United States senate and declared that if "you elect a republican president and congress, liberty bonds will go to par over night."

Introduced by Robert N. Stanfield, the republican nominee for senator Governor Harding had his audience in a happy frame of mind within a minute and there after he pitched the tone of his speech along humorous lines, using homely similes and examples to illustrate his point. Governor Harding was little known to Portland republicans yesterday, but when he finished his talk at the auditorium Saturday night he had established himself in the good graces of the party and won thousands of admirers.

Debt Totals $39,000,000,000. Possibly the most telling part of Governor Harding's speech was his attack on the waste of the administration in conducting the war. The governor prefaced his remarks by saying that the United States is in debt $30,000,000,000 and as he owns liberty bonds, he is concerned over this debt because he wants to know if the interest on his bonds will be paid.

He declared that liberty bonds have declined so that when he needed $1000 a few days ago and went to dispose of $1000 bonds he found himself $158 short of the required amount.

Election of a republican president and congress will bring the liberty bonds of 100 per cent, par, over night, he said. There must have been a large number of bondholders present from the way this prediction was cheered.

Three Billions Spent for Planes. Some $4,000,000,000 was spent by the ordinance department, said he speaker, and while all of this money was spent in this country, no firearms ever got across the sea. Another $3,000,000,000 was spent for airplanes, but not an American plane got across the ocean before the war ended. Instead of using approved planes and engines, charged Governor Harding, Secretary of War Baker lost nearly a year in trying to find something better and as a result of this delay the Germans had the supremacy of the air.

Of the billion and more dollars spent for building cantonments, 40 per cent, or $180,000,000, was wasted, asserted the speaker. This represents profits of contractors. There were 300,000 horses in the war, stated Governor Harding, and for these animals 500,000 sets of double harness were bought. Enough nosebags were bought to provide one for each horse. Enough branding irons were brought to use one iron for every two animals. There were 32,000,000 pairs of shoes for 3,000,000 soldiers, but when the war was over, the government, charged Governor Harding, did not put these shoes on the market so the people could buy them. Enough spur straps were bought to supply each officer with 36 sets.

Favoritism of the administration toward the south, where the democratic vote is solid, was shown by the speaker. He said that where $1 was collected from the south $10 were collected from the north, but where $9 were spent in the south only $1 was spent in the north.

He also told of a scheme to buy a tremendous amount of acreage for a cantonment site in one state and part of the site was a plantation which was bought for $432,000, although the owner had paid but $30,000 for it. So much land was being taken up that the people of the county protested at Washington, for with the withdrawal of the acreage there was not enough taxable land left to maintain the county government.

U. S. Got Cheated. The league of nations Governor Harding compared to a horse trade, and he complained that America didn't have a good horse trader at the table. And the horse that the president brought back from Washington didn't look good to Lodge and some others, who found the animal suffering from spavin, shortness of wing, bad teeth, ringbone and a few other defects—centered in what is known as article X.

Wars are now prevalent, Poland is at war. When Lloyd George was asked why the league of nations was not working in the case of Poland, Lloyd George replied that it was because America had not joined the league. Governor Harding explained that the league needs American soldiers and blood and gold to make it work, and he declared that if America were now a member of the league American soldiers would be in Poland.

Let U. S. Declare Its Wars. "We won't allow any foreign king or potentate to declare war for us," announced the speaker. "If you elect Jimmy Cox you'll have your boy going to war, and you won't have a thing to say about it. The covenant of the league of nations hasn't a single feeling or impulse that is American. It is in the mould of the country that established the tea tax."

"America will never permit six or seven foreign nations to say how many ships or how big an army America shall have," declared Governor Harding, "but if European nations want to sign a paper that they will limit their army and navy to certain numbers and to reduce them, America will sign, too." Despite the assertion of democrats that the league of nations will keep us out of war in the future, Governor Harding inquired why does Secretary of the Navy Daniels want $700,000,000 for battleships—which Cox says he won't build, but will use the money to irrigate the western states—and why does Secretary of War Baker ask for a standing army of 500,000?

No Freedom of Seas.

If the league of nations is to maintain peace, there is no need for such a naval and military programme, contended the speaker. "However," added the Iowa Governor, "America does need more battleships to protect American shipping, for, despite one of the 14 points, 'freedom of the seas,' there is no such freedom because Great Britain struck out that particular point."

"Let's not marry Europe to reform Europe," begged the speaker, "but instead let us hold a revival and invite Europe to attend." Discussing the tariff, Governor Harding said that the wool men and sheepmen of America would like nothing better right now than a tariff to keep Australian wool and lambs out of the market until the Americans can dispose of this year's clip and lambs. He predicted that if there is a republican president, senate and congress, everyone will get some benefit from a tariff wall.

Stanfield is Urged. At several points in his address the governor urged the voters of Oregon to give their support to Mr. Stanfield and asked the question direct if Stanfield wouldn't be a good man for senator. In introducing Governor Harding, Mr. Stanfield touched on the effects of the league of nations, the tariff and concluded by recounting the active part that Governor Harding took as a member of the national council of defense.

"SAFETY FIRST" Some Remarks on the Subject by Billy Sunday, Evangelist

The Rev. Billy Sunday, speaking on "Safety First" before an audience of seven thousand people assembled in the Law auditorium at Winona Assembly, Winona, Lake, Indiana said: "There can be no liberty where radicalism sits on the throne; where might takes the place of right, and where the torch is supreme."

"It's a dead open-and-shut proposition. We can't gunshod, sidestep, pussyfoot, detour or pass the buck," continued Mr. Sunday. "This country is going to be run on a basis of a government under the Constitution, and not by a brood of freshly arrived foreigners."

"Socialism is the sulphur and I. W. W. is the nitro which the radical bred mixes into the TNT of rebellion to blow the government into atoms, if it could. I would not prevent the immigration of worthy Europeans. Millions of such are worthy citizens, have come to our shores and become moral, religious and industrial assets."

"I believe that neither capital nor labor has the right to assume the right to settle all industrial disputes irrespective of the public welfare. 'America needs a tidal wave of the old-time religion. The big problem in the world's reconstruction is not finance, not the league of nations, but not in a league without reservations. I do not believe in turning our country over to a committee of foreigners. We have run it for 149 years and we can run it for the rest of the time. I do not believe in a foreign committee being endowed with the power to send our boys into battle and to say when and with whom we shall go to war. The Constitution declares that Congress is the only authorized power to declare war and arrange terms of peace."

"A league of nations without reservations would take this power from Congress and turn it over to a foreign committee. I do not believe in throwing the Constitution and Monroe Doctrine into the international scrap pile."
