HAD FUN WITH CONDUCTOR

Fat Man Proved to Him That There Were Others With a Keen Sense of Humor.

On an outbound trip the other afternoon the "whistling motorman" of the east Washington line had lulled his passengers into a pleasant semi-consciousness with the drowsy monotony of his Siberian waltz...

"Ornamental! Ornamental!" sang the conductor. The passengers awoke with a start, craned their necks for bearings and then giggled in unison as the car stopped at Oriental street...

And again the passengers giggled. The motorman here cut in with a lively strain from "Lobengrin" that held all engaged until a sweating fat man in the front of the car called back to the rear: "Say, conductor, will you let me off at Whetstone?"

"Whetstone? Whetstone?" was the puzzled response. "There is no street by that name on this line."

"Well, they told me it was near Arsenic," and the fat man rang for a stop.

The conductor glanced out of the window and growled: "Keystone avenue! Keystone avenue!"

And again the passengers giggled as the fat man climbed from the car. Indianapolis News.

Ocean Business Big says Farmer

They are telling a story here of a Kansas farmer who on a visit to the Tillamook coast saw the ocean for the first time. He was an oldish man, so the story goes, and one whose credulity had no limits.

The farmer understood that the ocean covered a sizable area, but he knew nothing about the rise and fall of tides. He was afflicted with rheumatism, and grumbled at one of the stores one day about his aches and pains...

"Why don't you soak your feet in the sea water?" The farmer turned this question over in his mind and finally decided to follow the advice.

The farmer took a pall and made his way to the beach. There he saw a man who was in uniform. The farmer had never seen a coast guard but concluded that the uniform denoted a man of authority.

"There's a lot of it," said the farmer waving the pall seaward. "There is," replied the coast guard, "and I have control over all you see of it." This convinced the farmer that the man in uniform must be a high official.

He would see another pallful. He walked to the same spot on the beach where he had found the coast guard on the previous afternoon. The tide was out and the farmer was astonished to find that the sea had receded for a couple of hundred feet.

Call for Fair Checks. C. A. McGhee, treasurer of the County Fair Board, has quite a number of checks still in his possession...

Tuesday, Nov. 8—"The Blue Bonnet" featuring Billie Rhodes. Two reel comedy.

Tuesday, Nov. 9—"The Mollycoddle" featuring Douglas Fairbanks. "Pathe Review."

Wednesday, Nov. 10—"The Cup of Fury" featuring all star cast taken from the book of the same name by Rupert Hughes.

Thursday, Nov. 11—"The New York Idea" featuring Alice Brady. "Hunted Spooks" two reel Harold Lloyd Comedy.

A real fight in which the only weapons used are bare knuckles, adds to the many thrills included in "The Mollycoddle," offered by Douglas Fairbanks, which will be shown at the Gem Theatre on Tuesday November 9.

The first blow is struck while the two men are on the edge of a cliff. They clinch and a moment later fall 50 feet into a tall tree below.

Even now there is no let-up and while the two men struggle, limb after limb of the tree gives way until they finally strike the ground.

There is more fighting and still more thrills as the two reach the edge of an overhanging rock, at last falling headlong through 50 feet of space and crashing through the roof of an abode but.

A river bank was reached and the fight was still on. Even after the contestants were hurled into the water they continued to hammer away at each other and away they were swept by the fast moving stream.

"The New York Idea"—which seems to be marry in haste and divorce in the same way—with Alice Brady in the staller role, comes to the Gem Theatre in this city on Thursday. Persons contemplating divorce should see it.

Political intrigue and romance have been woven together in Rupert Hughes' "The Cup of Fury." It deals with momentous events and with affairs of love in a way to keep one's interest on the jump. The story is an aftermath of the war, packed with suspense and dramatic interest.

The inside working of a band of expert crooks is disclosed in "Blackmail," a Metro special production.

The Telephone Situation. In the engineering of a telephone plant—switchboards, conduits, cables, pole lines and general mechanical equipment—we have always tried to anticipate the growth of a community and provide therefor by advance construction.

In the war period we were unable to maintain this reserve plant, as the very things we needed for telephone purposes were required and necessarily taken for government purposes.

As every business man knows, the problems of reconstruction following the war have been acute and prolonged to an entirely unexpected degree. Unusual conditions are prevalent throughout the entire manufacturing, mercantile and social world.

This advertisement is not meant to be one of apology, but one of explanation and even accomplishment. In the face of an unprecedented demand for telephone service in the last few months, hampered by the exhaustion of our reserve plant and difficulty in securing materials, we have added more telephones than for this year in the State of Oregon than in any similar period of telephone history.

In the State of Oregon, in the eight months ending August 31, we have added 6863 telephones. In the eight months ending July 31, 1917—before the war—we gained 2655 telephones.

In the State of Oregon we have approximately 2600 unfitted applications for telephone service. A similar situation exists all over the United States. We will continue to secure all the equipment possible, and the desires of the public will be met as soon as it is humanly possible to do so.

The Telephone Company regrets the inconvenience to prospective subscribers. It is anxious to give service as the patron is to receive it. The Company is doing all in its power to remedy conditions and furnish service in accordance with normal standards.
