EDISON MARSHALL

At rare intervals a hitherto unknown author flashes into the literary firmament like a comet. Some disappear as quickly while others become fixed luminaries. About once every decade a writer makes an instantaneous success with his first book. Edison Marshall, a young Oregon newspaperman, is a case in point. His story, "The Voice of the Pack," was sold out almost as soon as it was off the press and a second printing ran into many thousands of copies—literally a "best seller." It is a fascinating narrative of romance, adventure and nature lore in the mountains and forests of the Northwest and has a substantial quality which bespeaks permanent characteristics in its content, with other delightful tales likely to follow.

RED CROSS DRIVE DIRECTORS NAMED

Just at the time a Red Cross Membership Roll Call is about to be started, it seems advisable to bring to the minds of the people of this community the fact that although the war is over the Red Cross activities have not ceased, nor will they ever cease so long as humanity suffers and this organization lives.

But in order that it may live and be in a position to meet the demands made upon it, it must have the support of every community in the United States, for it is the one dollar membership that sustains it.

The work of the Red Cross in Tillamook County is under the direct supervision of the Tillamook Chapter, with an executive secretary in charge. Through its office over sixty cases have been filed during the past year, dealing with the many problems of the ex-service men and their families.

In order to take care of these problems, the Red Cross has so thoroughly systematized every feature, insurance, allotments and allowances, vocational training, disability claims and various other features, that the trained workers are able to give the necessary assistance with no cost whatever to the ex-service man. Work is also being done in connection with the Foreign Red Cross. During the flu epidemic of last winter this chapter rendered services that were greatly appreciated.

These and many other features of the work should be all the argument needed in favor of the coming Roll Call.

No one who has the interest of our ex-service men at heart, as well as that of humanity in general, would ever want to see the Red Cross forced out of existence for lack of support; the generous response to the yearly Roll Call will make possible the continuance of this great work.

A complete and careful canvass of the entire county is assured, the following named persons have charge of the work in the various school districts:
