OBJECT TO MENIAL DUTIES
Reason That is Assigned for the Present Scarcity of Trained Nurses in Hospitals.
The full utility of many hospitals is now impaired by a lack of nurse-writes "Girard" in the Philadelphia Press.
Howard Butler, Jr., is trustee of an important hospital here and he tells me they need 30 per cent more nurses than they can get.
"Why are nurses so scarce?" I asked.
"I presume," answered Mr. Butler, whose business, as you know, is that of a banker and broker, "it is because girls think they can earn more money in an easier way in some other occupation."
I have talked with doctors of wide hospital experience about it and they say that the old practice of making girls in training for nurses do drug-gery for a year or so has prevented many young women from entering the profession.
"What good," said one great surgeon, "did it do to a nurse's skill to make her scrub floors or wash windows? As well make medical students polish shoes, keep up the furnace fires and sweep out the lecture rooms."
Another physician of long experience and who is connected with a big hospital, added:
"The hospitals will be obliged to cut out the manual labor for training nurses and will probably reduce the years of training, or the country will go back to the conditions when it had few or no trained nurses."

He Made Eugenie Weep.
An old singer living in England, M. L. Albani, recalls an incident which indicates how heavily the late Empress Eugenie bore her many sorrows.
"Many years ago I used to take my holiday on Deeside," he writes the Daily Telegraph, "and once at least every season was called to Balmoral to sing before Queen Victoria. On one of these occasions the empress, who was on a visit at the castle, came with the queen to hear me. I believe that she had not heard any music since the death of the emperor, and I had scarcely finished my first song when she burst out crying. The queen, on seeing this, began to cry also, and I, too, from sympathy, I presume, with the two great ladies, could hardly restrain my tears. I, however, very soon recovered my composure and was able to continue my work."
