Mountaineers Make Daring Attempt to Climb Giant of the Himalayas.

RENEW ATTACK LATER

Explorers Get 21,000 Feet Up Kinchinjunga and Are Compelled to Stop by Bad Weather—Encounter Difficulties.

Manchester, England.—A Calcutta correspondent at Calcutta reports that great interest has been aroused by an attempt to climb Kinchinjunga, one of the giants of the Himalayas.

Lord Raeburn, editor of Mountaineering Art, and C. G. Crawford of Assam civil service, both members of the Alpine club, were known conducting preliminary explorations in the hope of finding an easy route to the summit.

More than one skirmish in the vicinity of Kinchinjunga was made, and the rains at the time were such that the ever-shifting ice fields and mountains were likely to come in in terrific avalanches, making climbing impossible without serious risk to life.

Further explorations led the climbers to the course of the Talung river, which takes its rise in the Talung mountains. Here they crossed streams and ridges of which had been washed through which they had to hew a way for several days. Unhindered by the rainy weather, they almost straight north to night, across the Gluchu Pass, 10,000 feet, to the Talung glacier, its almost immediately to the west of Kinchinjunga, and there obtained a glorious view of the mountain.

Encounter Great Difficulties. The party returned to Darjeeling to make their final preparations, encampment and large quantities of supplies. The rains, however, were so heavy that it was not until September 20 that the two explorers were able to start. Traveling out by the Sikkim ridge, they attacked Kinchinjunga from the southwest side and the glaciers. Access to the mountain by that direction was found to be difficult, but the party persevered and finally camped out at a level of 10,000 feet.

More difficulties were met and weather was experienced. Snow began to fall and the expedition became increasingly hazardous. A furious snow storm was overcome, but at that point the attempt had to be abandoned.

Return was made by a new pass about 18,000 feet high. The return was at first exceedingly bad, but conditions became better later. There was no rain on lower level, although occasional snow showers were frequent. Considerable difficulty was experienced when returning, owing to the depth of new snows on the mountain side, which were probably due to bad weather experienced in the part of September. Finally the party reached Darjeeling in the middle of October, having been away a month. Both the explorers were greatly impressed by the peaks, and it is said that, given good weather, a summit could be attained.

Attempt Made in 1899. It is interesting to recall that an attempt was made by Douglas Henshaw in 1899. Mr. Freshfield undertakes the expedition to Kinchinjunga, and he says, "It is to be noted that owing to the fact that cost and the difficulty of the mountain made partly to the fact that the Nepalese no European had up to the nineteenth century gone to the mountain. Even Sir Hooker did not approach near to explore the glaciers of the mountain as for official surveys, these were ignored and caricatured the mountain."

Freshfield did not think much of the mountain as a climbing point of view, and he said, "Of course, impossible," he said, "to go up and down 75,000 feet about some climbing in the popular sense of the word, but in the Alpine sense we had far more mountaineering for my taste, and ice-ax played but a very subordinate part in our journey."

Train Was for Himself. A man from Louisville, Ky.—He was a middle-aged man and had just bought a $350 train. "I shall send it for the little boy, you take it with you?" he asked. "The boy?" the man exclaimed. "The train is for myself. When I was a boy I missed the good things of life, and now that I am getting on in life, I want to have them. I am going to have a lot of fun with it, and then there will be the children to help enjoy it."

Checked at Journey's End. A man from Chicago, Ky.—Charles D. Younger, after an auto trip to Detroit, was seriously injured when his car was wrecked almost at the end of the journey. They were on their way home for several days.

Jersey Bull Calf. During the Pacific International Stock show at North Portland Mr. and Mrs. George Connor of Albany, purchased from William Maxwell of Tillamook, a richly bred Jersey bull calf, dropped last September. The dam of this calf has an official record of 550.88 pounds of fat and 10,322.5 pounds of milk in a year.

HEIRESS IS BESIEGED

Proposals of Marriage Pour in on "Cinderella of Roxbury"

Many Are Anxious to Help Former Maid Dispose of Her Inheritance of $250,000.

Boston.—Proposals of marriage from all sections of the country have been pouring in on Miss Agnes Jane McNevin, where she now resides in the great house which is a part of the $250,000 awarded to her from the estate of her former mistress, Mrs. Mary C. McKnight.

Charitable organizations and other systems for parting her from portions of her new estate have also besieged Miss McNevin in efforts to help her spend her fortune.

While Miss McNevin says she expects to do some good with the money bequeathed her by Mrs. McKnight, she said that she does not need the assistance of outsiders to work out her plans.

The "Cinderella of Roxbury," as Miss McNevin is known by those living in the locality, learned of her bequest several months ago and she is now residing in the house where she served her benefactor as maid for 25 years.

Twenty-five years ago she came to the door of the house which is now her own home, seeking the position of maid. A gruff appearing butler made known her request and conducted the girl into the presence of the late Mrs. McKnight, who showed her liking by promptly engaging her.

The young woman did her work faithfully and gradually accepted additional responsibilities until she finally became manager of the household. Upon the death of Mrs. McKnight she was "remembered" by her mistress to the extent of a quarter of a million dollars.

She says she is very happy in her good fortune, but that she would be happier still if Mrs. McKnight were still with her.

TWO ACROBATIC DOGS

"Jack" and "Jill" are two acrobatic dogs, owned by a New York man, that do the most difficult acrobatic feats without coaching. Their owner taught them to do the stunts and now they delight in performing for visitors. Their owner trained them for his own amusement and has built a complete set of apparatus for their use.

Says Water Drinking Shortened Pilgrims' Lives

Boston.—"Much drinking of water," was considered by Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth a contributory cause of the ravages of life that afflicted the Pilgrims in the early days. Hence H. Morse, head of the historical department at Mount Herson school, told the Bostonian society.

He also pointed out as a fact of curious historic interest that Pastor John Robinson, who led the Pilgrims into Holland but did not accompany them to New England, had taxes remitted on one-half a case of beer a month and one hoghead of wine every three months because he held a professorship in the University of Leyden.

Smoking Room for Women in Theater

New York.—Not to be outdone by men in a quiet smoke between acts, women patrons of the new Apollo theater, in New York city, will find a room fitted for their accommodation during the performance.

Rising to an Emergency

Cincinnati.—After firemen had carried Lillian Barker, aged ten, ill of diphtheria, from a burning room, the little girl asked them to save her doll. The firemen responded nobly.

Foundation Animals

During the Pacific International stock show at North Portland Mr. M. Perkins and C. B. Vantren of Tillamook purchased from Del Perkins of Carlton two fine Jersey yearling heifers and a young bull. The firm is already dairying with a good grade Jersey herd and these three animals make them an excellent foundation purebred herd.

U. S. TO HANDLE FOOD MARKETING

Federal Trade Commission Favors Supervision by Government Authorities.

WOULD ELIMINATE HOARDING

Establishment of Central Markets for Perishable Food Products and Creation of Licensing System Urged by Board.

Washington.—Establishment of central markets for perishable food products in all large cities and the setting up of a federal licensing system applicable to all dealers in such foods at those markets are proposed by the federal trade commission in its annual report to congress.

The commission's conclusions are based on an investigation covering many months, and it declares that federal action is necessary to obtain effective regulation and to avoid unfair and wasteful practices with the consequent effect on prices.

In the present system the commission sees as a hindrance to the proper passage of perishables from the producer to the consumer certain interstate dealings which it believes should be eliminated, and it suggests that the handling of these products be surrounded by numerous regulations and restrictions such as the recording of available supplies and the dating of cold-storage periods and provisions for auction marketing.

Would Eliminate Hoarding.

Facilities should be made adequate, the commission says, to enable the producer to ship freely into the central markets and "with proper protection of his interests." The marketing system should be so covered that objectionable hoarding would be eliminated and proper co-ordination of transportation facilities should be accomplished to make deliveries certain when required.

The commission says that "the needed reforms can hardly be expected to be accomplished by the initiative of the dealers," and asserts that state and municipal authorities lack adequate power to effectively regulate the handling of the food supplies.

Big Jump in Flour Profits.

Turning to wheat products, the commission says it has found that concentration of the milling industry has progressed far enough so that "probably ten of the largest milling concerns could supply the demand of the country for flour." The commission mentions incidentally that its figures from 37 milling corporations showed that their sales had increased from $100,000,000 to $354,000,000 between 1914 and 1918, while their annual profits had grown from $5,500,000 to $20,000,000 in the same period.

Reporting on the operation of the Webb-Pomeroy act, permitting formation of associations for export trade, the commission informs congress that this act has served as "a decided factor" in promoting the progress of American manufacturers in foreign markets. The commission says that during the year 43 associations, comprising approximately 732 concerns, whose offices and plants were distributed over 43 states, reported to it as operating under the export act.

The commission says also that the law, instead of increasing the strength of the already great American industrial establishments, has enabled the smaller concerns to band together in a fashion to push fully organized export trade in a keenly competitive manner, which they are not able to do at home. To this extent, the commission believes, the law has worked to the great advantage of the small firms.

BUYS WATCHES FOR SUBJECTS

Indian Princess Wants Her People Not to Rely on Sun for Time of Day.

Geneva.—The begum (princess) of Bhopal, India, who bought 4,000 silver watches to take back to her people in the central Indian state when she visited Switzerland in 1911, has just sent for another lot of 2,500 timepieces. She wants her subjects to be punctual and not rely on the sun for the time of day.

The Mohammed princess of Bhopal is the only female ruler of a state in India, and is also called sultan. The throne of Bhopal has descended in a female line for more than 75 years and many of the begums have displayed modern tendencies in looking after the welfare of their subjects, who number 665,000. Sultan Jehan begum succeeded to the throne in 1901.

Bhopal is the principal province of central India and its capital, the city of Bhopal, has about 75,000 population.

Out of a total of 297 suits filed in local courts since November 28, 1919, 143 have been for divorce.
