Tillamook is now large enough to initiate a Saturday afternoon closing scheme, at least through the summer months. Our winter has been so severe that everyone should be glad to enjoy all the good weather possible when it comes.

The argument has been advanced that most of the trading is done on Saturday afternoon, but that is no more, that a custom and a custom can be changed. Any other reason will go so well. If all business houses would close nobody would lose, for the business will be here just the same.

It is up to the business men, whether they want to break away from grandfather's method or not. This proposition is worth considering. Why not have the Chamber of Commerce start something along this line?

Speaking of Normalcy, the Headlight believes that nothing short of starvation will put the American people back to the condition they were in before the war.

The human race has passed thru the stone age, the iron age, etc., and it is now working its way through the silk shirt age, with a little glimmer of light far ahead, the beacon of normal conditions again.

Volunteers are wanted for the rail and shoe brigade.
