

Uncle Walt's Story

THE USE OF SICKNESS

HERE is the most wonderful book ever offered the public," said the agent with enthusiasm. "It is entitled 'Psychology and Disease,' and every page has an astounding revelation. When this book is universally read and understood, there won't be any disease in the world."

"Which is equivalent to saying that when the pigs are flying, a man with the rheumatism will get a job as a contractor," said Mrs. Curfew. "I have listened to agents for many years, and have heard all kinds of silly talk, but yours is the worst yet. You can't convince me that the day will ever come when a man with the jumping rheumatism, such as my husband is afflicted with, can sit down and cure himself by reading a book, even if the book is endorsed by congressmen and justices of the peace and other dignitaries without number."

"If disease ever is banished from the world, I have no doubt that something worse will come to take its place. I believe that everything in this world is here for a good purpose, even if it doesn't look that way at first glance."

"Early this spring there was an epidemic of measles in this neighborhood, and of course my little granddaughter had to come to visit me. She never comes when the health conditions are all that could be desired, but just as sure as there is smallpox or seven year itch or some other contagious disease rampant, that angel child comes to spend a few days with her beloved grandmother, and she catches everything there is going."

"She hadn't been here two days before she was down sick. She had more measles than I ever saw in one collection before, and her face was a sight to be seen. I was inclined to murmur and reprove, for I was just done with my housecleaning and was so tired I felt as though I'd like to lie down and sleep for six months, and there I was with a sick child in the house, and I was to be up night and day seeing that she didn't catch cold, for if a child catches cold when she has that disease, some of the measles are sure to strike in, and then she goes blind or loses her hearing or becomes an idiot."

"I was complaining to Mr. Curfew, and saying harsh, bitter things, when a boy came to the door with a telegram. It was from Cousin Susan, and she said she was coming on the night train with her three children to spend a week with me. She invites herself that way about once a year, and I always dread her coming, for her children are holy terrors, and there is no peace where they are."

"I never had a good excuse for heading Cousin Susan off before, and she had become a nightmare to me. But on that occasion I had an excuse all ready made. I sent back a telegram saying that my granddaughter was in the house with an aggravated attack of measles, and a policeman with a sawed-off shotgun was guarding the approaches to the house. Of course I didn't use exactly those words, but that was the meaning of my dispatch, and Cousin Susan had to take her offspring and unload them on her Aunt Maria, who had never suffered a visitation of that sort before."

"This shows that diseases have their use, and even a few measles in the house are a wellspring of pleasure, when we regard them properly, with a determination to realize our blessings. So I have no use for any book that shows how to abolish diseases, and now must disperse, for I have a hundred things to do."

Arabs Suffer From Famine.
"The Drinkers of Sunshine," as the Arab shepherds call themselves, are on the verge of starvation throughout Algeria, and unless wheat is imported from America it may have nothing but sunshine as a steady diet during the winter.

The threatening famine is the result of a year's drought. Seventy-five per cent of the sheep in Algeria have died as a result of the drought, and the Arab "Drinkers of Sunshine," dreamers and philosophers, incapable of any work but that of guarding their flocks, are in dire straits.

Out of Date Now.
"Did you hear what that young woman said?"
"No. What was it?"
"She told the young fellow with his hat that she 'just loved to cook.'"
"Ah! An old-fashioned girl. She's using the 'vamping' methods popular twenty years ago."

To Be Expected.
Bob—"Don't you weigh more than you did?" Belle—"A bit. I started a nine and a half pounds."—Boston Globe.

WAGE LONG WAR ON SAVAGES

Holland Never Able to Subdue Fierce Tribe Living in Rich East Indian Archipelago.

The military forces of Holland, which the news dispatches say are to be reduced nearly one-half, find considerable employment in the East Indian archipelago, nearly all of which belongs to the Dutch. It is a considerable territory, covering a distance from east to west as great as that from New York to San Francisco.

The wild native tribes are troublesome. But worst of all are the Acheenes, who occupy a little country at the north end of Sumatra. Acheen is an absolute monarchy, recognizing no authority or control from the Dutch or anybody else.

One of the longest wars in history has been fought by the Dutch against the Acheenes. It was started in 1872, and has been going on ever since, with no present prospect of bringing it to an end.

In former days the Acheenes, who are Malays, engaged largely in piracy. In their swift sailing proas they scoured the seas, capturing every unarmed vessel they came across, and customarily butchering everybody on board. By their depredations they almost destroyed trade through the straits of Malacca.

The Dutch did away with this mischief by running down the pirate craft with small steam vessels and destroying them. But the Acheenes are still independent and defiant on land. When the Dutch avenge an outrage by burning their villages and rice plantations, they retire to inaccessible fastnesses of the mountains. The best the Dutch can do is to hold the extreme northern tip of Sumatra, where they have planted a fortified town called Kota Radja. Usually about eight thousand troops are kept there in garrison.

Across the base of the tip a string of fourteen little forts extend connected with the town by railroad and telegraph. Each is defended by elaborate barbed-wire entanglements and by a hedge of the spiky plants called Spanish bayonets, thirty feet wide, which is even more effective. If a fort is attacked reinforcements from Kota Radja are summoned by wire. Not far from the town is Gold Mountain, which is said to be full of the yellow metal; but it is outside the line of forts and so the gold remains unused. For the Acheenes are just about the most ferocious savages in the world, a little fond of being mutilated of their enemies, whose legs, arms and ears they cut off.

The country is a primeval forest, peopled by orang-outangs and full of a deadly malaria.

Severe Spanish "Blue Law."
Kissing one's wife in public is a crime, according to the laws of Madrid, Spain. Therefore a severe reprimand and a warning not to let the misdemeanor occur again has just been administered to a visitor to Madrid who, when he assisted his wife into a cab at the door of his hotel on the Puerta del Sol, kissed her goodbye. A policeman on duty close by witnessed the offense and remonstrated, threatening to take the man to the police station, whereupon the visitor, a traveler in many lands, smiled and said: "Do your worst. Take me to the station house and we'll see what the punishment is for kissing one's wife." The policeman led him off to face his captives, who, on hearing the nature of the charge was even more severe than the ordinary policeman. He informed the offender that ignorance of the law was no excuse, but that he had committed a serious offense against the laws of Madrid, which forbids a man to kiss any woman while in the streets of the city, with or without her consent. He, however, let him off with a caution.

Lacks Sense of Right and Wrong.
A child's freak intellect is puzzling the Hampshire (England) authorities and the board of education. The child, a twelve-year-old girl, cannot distinguish right from wrong. Her father applied to the Odham magistrate, and obtained an order to send her to an industrial school. The attendance officer said she had been absent from school for six months, and stayed out all night several times, and recently walked 15 miles to Basingstoke, where she was found at midnight on the station platform. A doctor described the girl as morally and not mentally defective. The case was so unusual, he said, that all the facts had been submitted to the board of education. The child was normal, except that part of the intellect which enabled a person to discern right from wrong was missing.

Buried Forest Found.
A prehistoric forest, buried under 30 feet of meadow marsh, has been found near Chestnut Neck, on the New York-Atlantic City motor route. Cedar and oak trees have been found in a perfect state of preservation, while at other points the buried timber had been reduced to charcoal. The discovery was made by linemen erecting poles to carry electric power to the transatlantic wireless plant in Tuckerton. Poles 30 feet long are being used across a "bottomless" stretch of the Mullica river meadows.

Looked Like Nat Player.
Leta, aged five, was visiting in the country, and, seeing a potato but for the first time, she asked: "Mamma, does this play tennis?"
"No, dear," replied the mother.
"Why do you ask?"
"Because," answered the little one, "I just saw one with a sweater on."

Indigestion and Constipation.
"Prior to using Chamberlain's Tablets, I suffered dreadfully from indigestion. Nothing I ate agreed with me and I lost flesh and ran down in health. Chamberlain's Tablets strengthened my digestion and cured me of constipation," writes Mrs. George Stroup, Solvay, N. Y.

HOW TO GET DAIRY COWS CHEAPLY

We have been urging the farmers of Klamath County to milk more cows in order to balance the ever-increasing production of hay. It is not always best, however, to buy too many grown cows at the prices it is necessary to pay to get good ones. We do suggest that every farmer, who is finding it difficult to dispose of his hay, to buy a few cows, and with these as a nucleus he will be in a position to ship in each year a number of good dairy calves from either Tillamook or Coos counties, and thus establish as large a herd as he may desire at a very nominal cost.

Through the County Agent in Coos County we learn that every cow milked in that county is under test, and that this work has been going on for a number of years. As a result of this continuous testing dairy men over there are able to weed out all of their unprofitable cows, until now there is not a cow in the county giving under 300 pounds of butter fat per year. It is now possible to buy calves from this class of cows with records of from 300 to 500 pounds of butter fat and sired by good, registered dairy bulls. The Ezell Stock Farm shipped in ten heifer calves from there this spring, which were two weeks old when shipped, and which cost $12 per head plus an average of $9.95 express, or $18.95 laid down here. These calves appear to be very well bred, and are now about six weeks old and thriving well on a diet of skim milk and hay. Last spring this same farm shipped in ten head from Tillamook County which costs a trifle more, and these are now splendid looking yearlings, which will be ready to milk next spring.

We would like to see more of our farmers who want to get into the dairy business, adopt this plan of building up a herd. It takes a little longer, but there is certainly a big saving in the outlay of cash, and beyond a doubt these calves, if well cared for, will make splendid dairy animals, as good or better than any you can buy when full grown. By working together through the Farm Bureau we should be able to get the pick of the annual calf crop in either Coos or Tillamook county. Think it over, and let's get ready for next spring. —Klamath County Farm Bureau News.

WORK FOR THE EDITOR
It is said that anyone can be an editor. All that an editor has to do is to sit at his desk six days in the week, four months of the year and 12 months in the year and "edit" such stuff as this:

"A mischievous lad of Matherton threw a stone and struck a companion in the alley last Tuesday."

"John Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak, and fell, striking himself on the back porch."

"While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise home from a church social Saturday night, a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr. Green on the public square."

"Isaac Trimmer was playing with a cat Friday when it bit him on the veranda."

"Mr. White while harnessing a broncho last Saturday was killed just south of the corner." —Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

I'd walk a mile for a Camel

The pleasure is worth it. There's no substitute for Camel quality and that mild, fragrant Camel blend.

The fellow who smokes Camels, wants Camels. That's because Camels have a smoothness, a fragrance and a mildness you can't get in another cigarette.

Don't let anyone tell you that any other cigarette at any price is so good as Camels.

Let your own taste be the judge. Try Camels for yourself. A few smooth, refreshing puffs and you'd walk a mile for a Camel, too.
