

SUMMER RESORT. RUN BY STUDENTS

With the opening of the summer season at Bayocean Saturday, it is contemplated that the beautiful bay and ocean resort will experience its most successful year. The hotel, natorium, bungalow and tent city, dance hall, ice cream store, etc., are all under the management of a group of Reed college students, who hope not only to insert a college spirit into the beach, but render an efficient service as well. The organization is composed of students who have specialized in college in the work which they are performing at the resort.

One of the main attractions this year will be the "prom", the new dancehall, which will open with a six piece orchestra. It is expected to draw large numbers of people from Tillamook and the beaches along the way. The dances will be staged every Saturday and Wednesday evening and according to the management will be the best of their kind along the beaches. The "nac", the largest salt water tank in the Northwest, will be opened every day beginning Saturday.

A powerful radio set is being erected by George Henry of Portland, who has been doing graduate work in electrical engineering in Thorp college, California. Henry will keep in communication with a station in Portland and publish a leaflet of news daily. Hiking and boating excursions are being arranged at the hotel, and Captain Dodge is planning to run his launch frequently from this city.

Captain Ole Dromes is in charge of the ferries this season between Bay City and Bayocean, which meet at trains. On Wednesday and Saturday evenings, and on the Fourth, boats will run frequently from Bay City and Garibaldi.

Hotel Bayocean and the bungalows and tent city have been opened since the 25th.

ONE FOREST FIRE SO FAR THIS YEAR

SALEM, June 29.—It isn't the tenderfoot from the East that is a menace to Oregon forests through carelessness with camp fires, but rather that native Oregonian who has lived in or near the timber all his life, according to F. A. Elliott, state forester.

However, only one forest fire has been reported this season, and that not a bad one.

Why Eastern campers get fewer fires than Westerners is not easily accounted for.

"There are densely ignorant campers from the East," says Mr. Elliott, "who may need a lot of instruction as to how to make comfortable camps. They may camp in a shady place and then hunt two hours for water, but they do have respect for the trees. An Easterner who has driven 1000 miles across the treeless plains, praying for a tree big enough for a bird to roost in, is not going to rush out and hack down a lot of fine young trees out of simple cussedness, or leave a camp fire that will grow into a forest fire."

The state forester avers that the natives who have lived all their lives among the trees, and who have been taught to believe that Oregon's forests are inexhaustible, are first and most frequent offenders against the fire laws.

Citing figures relative to timber fire losses in recent years, the state forester shows that in 1917 the timber loss was $97,000, while the loss in mills, other buildings and sawed lumber was $1,044,000. In 1918 the loss on improvements, $158,000, was less than that on green timber, $734,000. Lightning having started a number of forest fires that year.

In 1920 the improvement loss, was $116,000 and the timber loss only $14,000.

Due to heavy rains last fall and winter, the forestry department has begun the present fire guarding season under some handicap caused by slashing conditions. Because of extremely wet weather it was impossible to burn slashings last fall. The let-down in the lumber market also had something to do with this, many lumbermen making no attempt to clean up, as they would have done under normal conditions.

Careful annual surveys of all fire hazard areas is part of the policy of the state forester. Whenever a tract is found that needs attention it is listed. Burning of slashings has been in progress throughout the present spring and will continue as long as it does not menace standing timber.

More money is available this year than last. The new Weeks law provides $25,000 in federal money for fire fighting use as against only $15,000 last year. It is the plan of the state department to spend about $20,000 this year in fire prevention and to save about $5000 for spring operations.

The department keeps twenty-four fire wardens regularly throughout the season and in addition a number of camp wardens who have police authority. They have authority to assume charge in any fire emergency.

Blank forms have been mailed by Secretary of State Koser to owners of aircraft in Oregon for purposes of registration and license. The license fee is $10. The law is a new one that became effective May 25, and few owners so far have made their applications.

FIRE LOSS IS $2,185,392

Fire losses in Oregon for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1921, aggregated $2,185,329.01, while the insurance at risk totaled $29,675,538.43, according to the annual report of the state fire marshal's department filed with Governor Olcott today. Fire losses for the previous 12 months aggregated $1,884,871.55 showing a substantial increase in the destruction of property.

Deaths resulting from fires totaled 36, as against 16 for the previous 12 months. Injuries reported from fires aggregated 26, as against nine for the preceding year.

Fires classified as strictly preventable resulted in damage amounting to $830,230.34, while fires reported as partly preventable caused losses aggregating $1,391,185.37.
