Band Features Descriptive Numbers

Real "Thriller" on Chautauqua Program.

Bland's Orchestral Band which is the largest musical organization to visit the Chautauqua this year is noted for the unusual, dramatic, descriptive, comedy and feature numbers it plays. Mr. Bland builds his programs with worlds of dash and variety. His bands are composed entirely of Americans and generally college educated men, so that he can secure much more effective entertainment than would be possible from foreign musicians.

A concert by Bland's band isn't just a slow sleepy succession of marches and overtures, but a rapid fire mixture of colorful stunts and entertaining novelty.

Each evening this company presents the great descriptive war scene, "The Battle of the Marne" with gorgeous electrical effects. This number is probably the most thrilling attempted by any Chautauqua band in the country and could be played by few if any organizations except Bland's Band. Another feature is the comedy sketch describing "the villages orchestra rehearsing for a Feature Film." The Band copies the difficulties of the small town musicians to a "t." It is a scream.

Mr. Herbert Nonneman, the director, and Mr. Burdette Bailey, xylophone soloists, are two of the most accomplished men in their lines in the country. Mr. Bailey's solos on his xylophone are one of the high spots of the whole Chautauqua.

In the afternoon prelude, one of the most interesting numbers is the "Hunting Scene" in which all of the noises and calls and effects of the forest and the hunt are brought out. Besides being artists in their band work, and many of the men doubling on two or three different instruments, there are an excellent male Quartet, two or three vocal soloists and several singing choruses.

The appearances of Bland's Orchestral Band has been greeted with wild enthusiasm on the largest chautauqua systems of the east for the past fifteen years but the band is making its first western visit this summer. It's coming will be a real event.
