SAW BIG PLOT IN FOOTBALL

Hard to Convince Turkish Authorities That the Game Was Not Revolutionary Camouflage.

It has always been a difficult matter to be a sportsman in Turkey. One Turk, Rehad Bey, tried it with a result weird enough to serve as a basis for a detective story.

It appears that the young Turk had organized a football team among his friends, together with some Greeks and Armenians, and began practicing. Shortly thereafter, in the middle of the night, police came to his house and carried him off to Scutari. There he was submitted to a long examination as to the club and the game of football.

The authorities were convinced that they had found a great plot, and that the club must be a secret society. A special messenger was sent for the ball, and that was duly examined and found to be an infernal machine. The rules of the game were considered to be another piece of damning evidence, and still worse were the sweaters and colors of the club.

After long deliberation the culprit was sent to the higher police authorities in Stambul, who went through a second long examination and came to the conclusion that the empire had been saved from disintegration by the early discovery of a great plot. They dispatched the whole matter to be inquired into at the sultan's palace at Yildiz, and a special commission took the matter in hand.

After much careful thought and examination of the evidence of the crime it was decided that there might be nothing in it, but that it must not be committed again.

OUTWITTING THE BOND THIEF

Wall Street Bankers Have Devised Some Novel Methods of Camouflaging Securities.

Many runners in Wall Street are adopting novel methods of their own to safeguard the securities given in their care for delivery. In some instances firms have made suggestions and rules for "camouflaging" the handling of stocks and bonds outside of their offices. One broker's house has all securities pinned inside newspapers and one of its runners apparently walks around with a single newspaper under his arm which has attached to its pages inside valuable bonds and stocks. Yet another firm has hired former policemen to handle its deliveries of stock.

Another firm has presented its runners with suits, the vests of which have large inside pockets which are buttoned and in these the securities are carried and must be on pain of dismissal.

One wet day recently a special messenger of a large brokerage house carried two Liberty bonds of $50,000 apiece and three of $10,000 each pinned inside a closed umbrella.—Wall Street Journal.

Eastern Women Advancing.

Feet fit for feats, both as to shape and shoes, are no longer confined to men nor yet to the women of the western world, says a bulletin from the national board of the Y. W. C. A. In the recent Olympic races of the Far East, held in Shanghai, 1,200 girls and young women took part. Of these 200 were from Japan and the Philippine Islands, and the rest from China, 500 being Shanghai girls. The Shanghai delegation was selected and trained for the events by the Young Women's Christian association of Shanghai. "It is within the last six years that this activity in the land of little bound feet has developed," writes Miss Florence Brown of Rochester, N. Y., who is at present in Shanghai for the Y. W. C. A. "In 1915, when the last Olympic games were held," she says, "the only girls who took part were a few Filipino girls, who formed a baseball team."

Pacific Live Stock Exposition Dairy Show to Be Large

The live stock breeders of the East have been working to achieve perfection for nearly a century and they have secured remarkable results, but the pictures shown above are not animals from the East and their type would not shame the skill of any breeder on earth. They have beautiful conformation, style and quality in every line, and would stand high in any dairy show in the world. One of these animals is the Junior Holstein bull calf shown at the Pacific International last year. He came from Hollywood Farm, Hollywood, Washington, and won high honors. The other is a Jersey heifer calf from Iron Mine farm at Oswego, Oregon, also on show at the Pacific International. The quality of dairy animals of all breeds on the Pacific Coast is a source of perpetual surprise to the dairy breeders of other sections. Without losing type, they have size and constitution, which the dairymen loves, and which any animal must have to endure.

The dairy industry of the Pacific Coast has grown steadily since its inception. This is partly on account of the favorable climate and wealth of feed produced here. The possibilities for increasing the output of dairy products are almost limitless. There are markets both at home and abroad for many times the amount of cheese and butter now made. The difficulty has been largely due to the unprofitable cows. High quality of animals will do away with this.

There is no place east or west, north or south, where one interested in dairy cattle can find so many in one place and select such quality as at the Pacific International at North Portland, Nov. 5-12.
