IN JUSTICE COURT

Arthur Johnstone of this city was arrested this week, and arraigned before Justice Stanley on the 2nd inst., charged with "seduction of a chaste, unmarried female." The charge was preferred by the girl's father C. M. Martin of this city.

Johnstone waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury and defendant's bail was fixed at $1,000.

State vs. Elmer Williams, charged with "unlawful hunting." The information was filed by G. E. Leach district deputy game warden. Williams plead guilty and was fined $25 and $10 costs.

Charley Kunze of Nehalem was expected to be through with their work in a few days, when they will return to Portland.

WILD CATS INCREASING IN COUNTY AT RAPID RATE

Wild cats are increasing rapidly in number in this county, states Albert Audemauer of Hebo, who, with two of his sons was in town Wednesday. The sons cashed in on 15 cat scalps, all of the animals being killed in this month, at the rate of $2 per topknot, and the hides will be shipped east, where it is likely they will bring $4 each in the fur markets. Other parties bringing in scalps were Geo. Kellow of Hebo, 2 coyote and one bob cat scalp; C. H. Himes of Trask 1 bobcat; John Jenck of Cloverdale, 1 bobcat.

Orlando Putnam of Hebo, recently lost all of his chickens by a raid of wild cats, and one settler down in that section lost all of his young goats from wildcat depredations recently. In a few instances young calves have been attacked by these cats.

During November the County Clerk paid out $62.50 for wild cat scalps; and up to the 7th inst. $50 has already been paid this month on cut bounties.

WORST GALE OF SEASON

One of the worst gales of the season prevailed along the Tillamook coast Thursday afternoon and night. Windows were blown in, fences demolished, and bricks from chimneys hurtled downward, while the gale lasted, making it dangerous for pedestrians and auto travellers after night. Burr Beals, Jr., who took Mrs. Anna Anderson his wife's mother to Portland Thursday night, reports a wild ride over the highway between Tillamook and Portland. Added to the wind squalls was a rain storm that let the rain down in torrents. Added to the untoward weather conditions. Burr states that frequently they heard an uncanny crash, when some big fir yielding to the wind pressure, toppled over and fell off to one side of the road. The trip contained real elements of danger, but they got through to Portland in time for Mrs. Anderson to take the next train east, in answer to a wire giving news of the death of an uncle at Kansas City.

Mrs. J. P. Varnum accompanied her father Carl H. Jackson to Portland, Tuesday morning and will remain until Sunday.

Carl H. Jackson of Portland was in the city Monday on business.

ROOSEVELT HIGHWAY BEING BOOSTED AT COOS BAY

The proposed Roosevelt highway, which is designed to pass through Tillamook county, when finished, is being vigorously pushed by the commercial and other civic bodies in Coos county.

The scheme of highway paralleling the coast of the Pacific through Washington, Oregon and California, was evolved in the fertile brain of B. F. Jones, a Newport attorney and all-around booster for public improvements, and the Coos county people are now working hard to get the several coast counties united in an effort to secure influence to get an appropriation from Congress in the nature of federal aid to help construct the road in the near future.

The idea is popular all along the coast, even in the interior sections of the state, as such a highway would benefit all parts of the state, by reflex action. The wonderful scenic beauty of the coast bordering the three states cannot be excelled as added to the beauty of the ocean are innumerable lakes and rivers, mountain effects and a wealth of forested hills, with the bathing and other natural attractions of the beaches along the line of the proposed highway.

When built, the road would be an extremely popular tourist route and would add to the material wealth and settlement of the whole coast section, contiguous to the line of the highway.

COUNTY ROAD TRAVEL NOW

GETTING BACK TO NORMALCY

Roadmaster John Carrol reports that by the last of the week, road travel will be practically back to where it was before the big storm and ensuing flood struck us.

A pile driver is working at the approach of the Johnson bridge northeast of town on the Trask river and it is hoped to have the bridge repaired so that it can be used by Saturday night of the present week.

The government pile driver is working on the Tillamook bridge, the approaches to which were taken out by the breaking of a log boom in the river above that structure, during the memorable flood of Sunday November 13th last. It is hoped to have this bridge ready for travel today. This will connect us travel with Netarts and the action to the south.

A suspension bridge has already been constructed over the Wilson river at the Tinnetat bridge, for the accommodation of foot travellers.

Clearing and other work are progressing on the Bayocean road, which is now clear from the old ship yard to the Tillamook river bridge. All slides on the Bayocean road have been cleared. The heavy northwest wind that prevailed after the big flood, did damage to the Bayocean road to the extent of at least $4,000 states the roadmaster. Portions of the old road near Memaloosa Point were washed out by the high tides, that were driven before the high wind.

A big tree crashed across the trestle bridge near Mokler during the wind storm and did some damage, which has been repaired.

It is the opinion of the roadmaster that Tillamook county escaped with less damage after all, than a majority of the coast counties. Conditions after the flood are bad in Coos and Curry counties, but it is believed that Lincoln county was the worst sufferer.

CRUISERS FINISH WORK

The crew of timber cruisers who went up on Wilson river six weeks ago, to retrace the large timber tract belonging to the Whitney and Hammond people on Wilson river, now checking on the same. They have finished their cruise and are in the city Tuesday last, and said the big diking proposition was slowly coming along. The bad weather for the past three weeks has slowed the work down, but the big dikes, will get there.

The Better Way

There are two ways of learning the value of Travelers Automobile Insurance.

The first is by listening to what the insurance agent has to say.

The second is by actual experience. Experience is a mighty good teacher—but the bills he sends in for tuition amounts to a heap more than a few insurance premiums.
