When Winter grips your oil An overworked starter and exhausted batteries are only a part of the price you pay for using an oil which congeals in cold weather. While the starter is grinding away and before the heat of the engine is sufficient to melt the congealed oil, serious damage may result from lack of lubrication to cylinder walls and bearing surfaces. Zerolene Flows Freely at Zero Zerolene No. 1, No. 3 and No. 5, which are good cold test oils, remain fluid and meet winter conditions perfectly. They move freely about the pistons and bearings, and offer a minimum of resistance in the engine, thereby relieving the battery. Lubricate exclusively with Zerolene, adopting the cold weather recommendations in the Zerolene chart at garages and service stations, and you will avoid cold weather troubles.
