SHIP WRECKED MARINER HAS NOTHING ON "DOC"

Many gray hairs have appeared on the head of E. E. Koch, proprietor of the Tillamook Drug store, since a very harrowing experience that befell him last Sunday morning while hunting the elusive duck at what is known as Harrison's Lake south of this city. "Doc" and his party were in two separate boats on the lake and were becoming nervous over the size of their bag. The popular apothecary was alone in one of the skiffs and, being so intent on some of the water fowl that were flying toward him, he did not notice that his trusty ship was rapidly becoming water logged. His eyes were fixed on the heavens while his ship was sinking under his feet.

The first realization that "Doc" had of the catastrophe was when the water started running in his ears. His eyes still fastened on a lonesome duck that did not seem to know where to light.

Cries for help filled the air until the unfortunate hunter was rescued from his perilous position in four feet of water and returned home to dry out.

THEORY ADVANCED BY MANY

What Might Be Called the Evolution of Evolution as Explained by John Burroughs.

It is interesting to note that the doctrine of evolution itself has undergone as complete an evolution as has any animal species with which it deals. We find the germ of it, so to speak, in the early Greek philosophers and not much more.

Crude, half-developed forms of it begin to appear in the Eighteenth century of our era and become more and more developed in the Nineteenth, till they approximate completion in Darwin. In Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire, 1795, there are glimpses of the theory, but in Lamarck, near the beginning of the Nineteenth century, the theory is so fully developed that it anticipates Darwin on many points; often full of crudities and absurdities, yet Lamarck hits the mark surprisingly often.

In 1813 Dr. W. C. Wells, an Englishman, read a paper before the Royal Society in London that contains a passage that might have come from the pages of Darwin. In the anonymous and famous volume called "Vestiges of Creation," published in 1844, the doctrine of the mutability of species is forcibly put. Then in Herbert Spencer in 1852 the evolution theory of development receives a fresh impetus, till it matures in the minds of Darwin and Wallace in the late 50s. The inherent impulse toward development is also in Aristotle. It crops out again in Lamarck, but was repudiated by Darwin.—From "The Last Harvest," by John Burroughs.

AFTER A VISIT TO DENTIST

Writer Recalls Some Impressions That Some of Us Can Shudderingly Indorse.

The only person who seems to pay any attention to the "smile" sign in a dentist's office is the dentist himself.

Oddly enough, dental chairs are designed with a view to the patient's comfort.

You never realize what a big mouth you have till the dentist begins laying his scaffolding in it.

There is nothing so unnecessary as his preliminary announcement, "Now, this may hurt a little."

The first step in painless extraction is the injection of the anesthetic into the gums.

The phrase, to take someone's head off, undoubtedly originated with a dentist's efforts to get the better of a stubborn wisdom tooth.

The sweetest words that ever fell on your ear are: "That will be all for today."

You never had so much fun with a glass of water before.

Getting outside, you feel like a stranger in the world.

The worst pain of all comes when you get your bill.—Edmund J. Kiefer, in the New York Sun.

Hailstones Formed During Heat.

It is during summer-time that hailstones occur most frequently. It is the heat of summer that gives rise to them, for they can be formed only in thundery weather.

When there is thunder about there are always very strong upward draughts of air. As raindrops begin to fall they are caught by these currents and carried to great heights, where they freeze solid. If they now fall to earth they arrive in the form of the small hailstones that are usually seen. Sometimes, however, after falling through the clouds and receiving a coating of moisture, they are carried up again by other currents. The moisture freezes upon them, increasing their size.

The process may go on for some time, in which case the hailstone receives coating after coating of ice until it becomes as large as a marble or even an egg.

"Shished" the Tiger Away.

It was a frequent occurrence for a tiger to carry off a Chinese coolie in the Malay peninsula, according to a traveler who spent some time in that country. These persons, he said, could seldom be brought to believe in the reality of dangers from animals that they looked on as only cats of abnormal dimensions. I saw this valor of ignorance tragically illustrated one day when I took some police out to help me track a tiger responsible for the loss of many lives. From a too distant eminence we soon caught sight of a Chinaman slowly strolling along sucking a piece of sugarcane. Out sprang a tiger, but missed his mark, the back of the man's head. Without any acceleration of pace, the coolie, merely withdrawing the cane from his mouth, waved at the tiger and "shished" him away.

Not the Same Poincare.

There is growing up a distinct Einstein tradition concerning the great mathematician's habits and personality. The following is the latest addition to the collection: Einstein was walking bareheaded across Bavaria square in Berlin. One of his friends halted him: "Well, what do you think of Poincare?" "I think he is a very talented man." "Yes, but what darling?" "The darling of genius." "But what a frenzied fury against his antagonist!" "Oh, no, not at all. You don't know him." "Well, but at least, professor, you won't deny that his determined enmity of Germany, and that his megalomania—" "Oh," said Einstein, "you're talking about Raynaud Poincare, the premier." "No," said Henri Poincare, the mathematician.

always find time to listen to your demands and requests, but when it is necessary to present a grievance, be sure you have weighed the problem carefully, and always remember the biblical saying "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you."

"The vote of the people on the 18th ultimo is conclusive evidence that you want the proposed armory and I will put forth every effort to accomplish this end and have an early completion of this much needed edifice. Company K of this city, under the command of Captain Jacob E. Shearer, is one of the highest rated companies of the state militia, and the citizens of Tillamook have reason to feel proud of an organization so ably conducted, and we should put forth every effort to see that the boys of this organization are properly quartered in a building that would add to their comfort and efficiency.

"The school district is badly in need of more room and a new building is needed at once. Plans for this new building are now in the hands of the board of education and immediate steps will be taken for the erection of same so that it will be available for the term of school beginning about September 1st, 1923. This move by the school board is a worthy one and should have your unqualified support, and I trust that your cooperation in this matter can be depended upon.

"I advocate that the avenues in this city should be renamed, using, instead of numerals, the names of such dignitaries as the past presidents of the United States, the past governors of the State of Oregon, or the names of the different trees. In making the change as stated, a person of average intelligence would be able to find an address when directed properly.

"I believe that the people who live adjacent to our city and who expect protection in event of fire from our fire department should either vote to extend the city limits so that they could have this protection, or they should tax themselves an amount equal to our share of the city tax and turn this amount into the city for their share of the maintenance of this department."

"I believe that the city charter should be so amended that whenever the required majority of property holders petition for street improvement by paving that it shall be the duty of said petitioners to post with the city a bond of sufficient size to guarantee the payment of all indebtedness against all the property affected by said petition, thereby eliminating the city as a property holder in the city by reason of default.

"It has been said that it is human to err, and I do not want to appear in the role of a person being so infallible that I could not make a mistake, but if I am wrong in any of my proposals, or if I make a mistake, I assure you that it will have been of the head and not of the heart. May I not solicit your support in handling these affairs?"
