CREDIT SNEEZE TO SCULPTOR
Prometheus Said to Have Introduced the Action to the World of Mortals.

The Greeks, who relied upon all ancient and inherited customs, and after them the Romans, had an elaborate code by which they distinguished whether a sneeze was to be regarded as a blessing or a malign portent, the distinction being made according to the time, place and circumstances.

Thus, if one sneezed between midday and midnight, the sneeze was happy, unless the moon chanced at the time to be in the sign of the Virgin, the Twins, the Crab or the Scorpion, when it became an evil omen. Both Greeks and Romans regarded "sneezing to the right," that is, turning to the right side as the sneeze occurred, as a most happy omen.

Father Fannin Strada, who has made the most erudite researches into the history and literature of the sneeze, says that Prometheus introduced it to mortals. He had made a statue which he wished to endow with life, and for this purpose he stole a beam of sunlight. Wishing to conceal the theft from Apollo, he hid the beam in his snuff box. Shortly afterward, being desirous of taking a pinch of snuff, he absentmindedly put the beam up his nose—causing himself to sneeze violently.

GIANT TREES CENTURIES OLD
Sycamores Near Long Island City Believed to Be Good for Many More Years of Life.

"Old Sycamore," a giant tree at Wheatley, L. I., was born only 57 years after Columbus landed at San Salvador, in 1492. It was eighty years old when Hendrick Hudson first saw Long Island.

This is the opinion of experts who have examined the giant sycamore. Its age is estimated between 300 and 400 years, more likely the latter, it is said. The trunk near the ground is 24 feet in circumference and some of the limbs, half way up even, are larger than the trunks of many trees which claim to be patriarchs.

The height of "Old Sycamore" has not been ascertained, but it towers over the landscape in lordly fashion. Ninety years ago the place was used by the county butcher as his home. His beef when slaughtered was hung on chains from "Old Sycamore's" limbs.

The tree is said to be in splendid condition, and good for a century or so more.

The community was saddened on Sunday to hear of the death of little Jean Frances Stevens, eight months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stevens, of Mohler. The baby was taken ill very suddenly with lobar pneumonia and in spite of every aid she passed away Sunday at nine o'clock.

Funeral services were held at Nehalem on Wednesday.

AMERICAN LEGION

Stepping forward and asking efficient command in movements for the city's welfare has won an enviable standing for American Legion members of the Leon Ozie Post No. 2 of Nevada, Mo., and its observance of Christmas added additional laurels. A charity organization of Nevada requested the legion men to take charge of the distribution of Christmas stockings. A large Christmas tree was erected by the legionnaires in their hall, and 168 stockings distributed to the children of the city.

Disabled veterans of the World War will be the beneficiaries if three bills introduced recently in Congress at the request of the American Legion, become laws. One of the bills provides financial assistance to disabled men in establishing them on self-sustaining farms. It has been referred to the committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. August 9, 1926, and for conversion of government term insurance until March 3, 1931, is afforded by other measures. A bill provides that in cases where the veteran is "indigent" his insurance may be reinstated and the lapsed premiums deducted from the face value of his policy.

A number of senators are backing the American Legion's fight for total restriction of immigration for a period of five years. A bill was introduced in the Senate providing for the appointment of a special non-political committee to investigate the immigrating situation with respect to the labor supply.

Legion leaders are rejoicing over the fact that President Harding has signed the Fish bill, as amended by the Senate, which affords an increase for nurses from $20 to $50 a month for disabled ex-service men who have lost their sight or both arms or both legs.

Validity of the Iowa bonds to pay a bonus to ex-service men will be settled by the Iowa Supreme court at the January session and the bonds will probably be sold by the end of the month. In the opinion of state officials of the American Legion, a test suit will be filed covering every possible question that might be raised in order that the decision of the Supreme court will settle the case for good.

American Legion national headquarters has received a check for $20,352.10 from Kenosaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, as the Legion's share in the proceeds of the tie game in the last world's series in New York. Similar checks have been sent to the Veterans of the Foreign Wars and to the Disabled Veterans of the Foreign Wars and to the Disabled Veterans of the World War, according to a letter from Mr. Landis. The gift from organized baseball to the ex-service organizations represents one half of the proceeds of the third world's series game. It was made with the understanding that it would be expended in the relief of disabled world war veterans. Legion national headquarters has announced that its share of the money will be used solely for sick and wounded veterans and that the machinery for its distribution will be authorized at the next meeting of that organization's national finance committee.
