ers in the movement promised practical assistance to farmers in their endeavors to help themselves through co-operative marketing associations and their other organizations. As part of the state development program, the chamber voted to raise a fund of $300,000, a considerable part of which was to be expended in efforts directed specifically toward improvement in the condition of the farmers of the state.

That would have been a big step for organized industry to take. It seemed to indicate unusual insight on the part of Portland's business interests into the essentials of prosperity.

But for some time there has been more or less evidence that all was not well with the progress of that high-minded program. Many among those who placed faith in it at the outset have become skeptical of the sincerity behind it as originally outlined.

In this connection certain questions will not down.

For example, why is that $300,000 state development fund so slow in accumulating? We understand that not a third of it is yet subscribed and that the whole proposition is somewhat shelved, at least for the time being.

Why did the Portland Chamber of Commerce oppose the anti-alien land ownership bill in the recent legislature? That bill was wanted badly by the farmers of the state who must compete under present conditions with oriental producers.

Why did the agricultural committee of the chamber of commerce refuse to indorse the dairymen's bill in the legislature prohibiting the adulteration of milk and butter by the mixing therein of coconut oil or other vegetable fats?

What constitutes the Associated Industries of Oregon, the organization that is credited with leadership in bringing a referendum against the dairymen's bill just mentioned? What if any, is the relationship between the Associated Industries and the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

Some way or other, actions in these cases hardly seem to square with promises, and the farmers of Oregon would like to know if the above cases are fair samples of what may be expected in the way of future aid from the business interests of Portland.—Oregon Farmer.

It should not take long for anyone who cares to make the observation to decide that the modern automobile is a contender for first place and is easily the victor over the home. There are any number of people who never hesitate to enter into an iron-clad partial payment plan of owning an automobile who would think you crazy to ask them to do as much towards owning a home. It is simply the result of evolution and the continual cry against high taxes. People are gun shy of real estate because of the belief that they will be taxed to death, yet they will not hesitate to buy an automobile, which deteriorates faster than any known serviceable commodity on the market. And talk about taxes, we wonder if anyone ever figured up the cost of owning an automobile. If they did they would never howl against taxes on a home. We admire the man who puts his money into an automobile because it is putting it where the whole family can get some of the benefit, but there is a question as to the wisdom of owning an automobile and paying rent for a home. It is burning the candle at both ends.—Coos Bay Harbor.

The Portland-Tillamook Stage line is remodeling its depot at Tillamook. There will be a large waiting room as well as a separate smoking room. The main waiting room will be equipped with tables, writing material and periodicals in order that anybody who wishes to spend a few hours may do so in a profitable manner. We wish to extend an invitation to the public to make these waiting rooms their headquarters when in town. We would request also that anybody who has finished reading a magazine and has no further use for the same bring it to the depot in order that others may read it. This will help to give you a wider assortment to read. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. King are going to take charge of the depot and I feel safe in saying will be more than anxious to make you feel at home.—Portland-Tillamook Stage Line. By Ivan Donaldson.
