

DATRYMEN PROSPER

try, you should get the statistics of the yearly output and sale of the cheese that is produced from the milk of these various fine herds of dairy cows, and together with what you have seen and what you have read or heard as to the value of the industry in dollars and cents annually, you have a concrete example of the productiveness of our greatest business.

It must be understood, however, that equal milk conditions, do not obtain, where you do not find our splendid bottom lands, and where our equable climate is not found. Our grass in itself contains elements that make for an ideal production of milk, both in volume and in quality, and add to this the fact that our winter climate is mild compared with outside sections of the state, and you have two very good contributing conditions which are hard to parallel. And it is these conditions that account for the hundreds of dairy cows, the big barns and the prosperous condition of the capable dairymen. Another factor, not to be overlooked, and of great importance, is the matter of good market roads. It is along our best roads that the dairy industry is naturally the most prosperous, for much depends upon the ability of the dairyman to get his milk quickly and cheaply to market. Tillamook county dairymen have also been prompt to realize that the better bred his cow is, the more milk he will get, and the result has been a great effort upon the part of our dairymen to improve the milking strains of their herds, and if th stranger who is looking us over, wants to see exhibits of the best dairy stock in this county, he should by all means attend that excellent institution, the Tillamook county fair, where he will be made fully acquainted with the fine thoroughbred stock of the county.
