ARMY MASK HAS NEW FEATURES
Makes It Possible for Officers to Give Orders in Battle Without Removal.

Washington.—The chemical warfare service of the army has developed a new gas mask so constructed as to enable the wearer to carry on conversation while using it and thus making it possible for officers to give orders in battle without removing it. Such a mask will be of vital importance in troop operations, and the invention of the speaking device in this new type of mask is regarded by army experts as the greatest improvement in gas masks since the close of the World war. They regard it as the most nearly perfect device of its kind in the world.

Wearer Can Talk.
The new mask has a sort of diaphragm attachment somewhat similar in appearance to that used on phonographs. By means of it the wearer of the mask can carry on conversation with about 80 per cent of the efficiency of the average speaking voice. American experts had been trying to achieve the same result through a telephone attachment, but with the development of the diaphragm idea the attempt to arrange the mask so as to provide for telephone conversation has been abandoned. The diaphragm attachment is less cumbersome, not complex, and experiments conducted by the army have demonstrated that the human voice is reproduced efficiently through use of the new attachment.

The perfection of the new mask has reached the point where orders have been given for its production on a considerable scale at the Edgewood arsenal. The new mask embodies a number of other recent developments. It contains a new canister which, through the addition of new chemicals, not only protects the wearer against the ordinary gases used in chemical warfare but also against ammonia fumes and the deadly carbon monoxide. It is expected that this improvement will make the new mask invaluable to firemen in great cities, as well as to mine workers and those who are employed in the fumigation of vessels.

Other New Features.
There are also features embraced in the construction of the new "all-purpose" canister that lessen air resistance and reduce the distress of breathing to practically a negligible quantity. This improvement includes elimination of the nose and mouth pieces and has resulted in considerable reduction in the amount of charcoal used in the mask. The new mask likewise contains a device for passing dry air from the chemicals over the eyeglasses of the mask. This prevents collection of moisture and considerably improves the vision. A special arrangement also enables the chemical containing case to be carried under the arm instead of on the chest, as in other types of masks, and thus provides greater freedom in body movement of the wearer.

Experiments are also being conducted with chemicals that render cloth impervious to burning gases, but which will at the same time permit moisture from the human body to escape.

WHOLE WRECKS BIG FISH-POND WHEN CAUGHT

Vineyard Haven.—The fish pond of Allen and Ernest Flanders of Chilmark in Vineyard sound is a strong one, but it wasn't made for the purpose of impounding so big a sea going monster as a whale.

When the Flanders brothers went out to their traps they discovered that one of the animals of the kind that swallowed Jonah had practically wrecked their pond.

The lashing around of the mammal broke off several stakes, tore the netting so badly that it will take several days for repairs, and in addition released probably hundreds of pounds of fish from the pond.

The whale escaped and the brothers came in shore to tell the story and exhibit the torn netting as evidence that the big fellow had wrought the damage. The whale entered the traps through the opening which is eight feet wide.

FIND SPECTACLES MORE THAN 125 YEARS OLD

Piqua, O.—Three pairs of spectacles, over 125 years old, have been discovered in the home of Mrs. O. R. Mullendore. They were the property of her great-grandmother, Mrs. Jane Brown Patterson, who came with her husband, Robert Patterson, from Ireland to Piqua in 1818, where the two settled on a farm.

Two pairs of the eyeglasses are of German silver, while the third is of brass. Unlike most modern glasses, they serve only to magnify the object upon which they are focussed.

Mrs. Mullendore still is occupying the farm upon which the Pattersons settled in 1818. It was purchased from the government.

JAPS IMPORTING ARTIFICIAL SILK

Yokohama, Japan.—While Japan is the largest exporter of natural silk, she is importing artificial silk for her own purposes. Last year 134,000 pounds of this commodity was brought to this country from England, France and Switzerland.

BUTTER FAT UP 4c

The dairymen of this county are pleased with the late advance of butterfat four cents over previous prices this year. This will mean a substantial saving to the dairymen of the county and will fatten the milk checks.

Harry Miller was a passenger for Portland Saturday last.

1000 CAR LOADS OF HAY

Last year Tillamook county imported from other parts of the state, about 800 carloads of hay, mostly from the Eastern Oregon fields. This year, states a prominent cattle breeder, this county will need at least 1000 car loads.
