FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 7

A COUNTY INSTITUTION

Good morning. The Headlight is glad to greet and welcome every one of you to the Tenth Annual Tillamook County Fair.

The fair board has promised to make this the most successful county exposition ever held in this community and from the appearances of the work and exhibits their promise will be fulfilled.

It would be hard to enumerate all the advantages accruing from such an institution as this. First, we might mention the wonderful get-together spirit which necessarily must prevail in the working out of such a program; next, the great stimulus to pride in achievement which is gained by a comparison of products and animals and the friendly rivalry to attain the highest place.

Tillamook has just experienced one of the driest seasons in years. However, crops here do not seem to be suffering overly much from it.

Prunes ought to be easy to get this year. Trees in the Willamette valley prune sections are breaking down from the overload of fruit.

Bands of wild geese have been heard flying south at night recently. The Indians would say that this presages an early winter.

W. H. Holmes, the well known attorney from Portland, was in the city the later part of the week. He is now 73 years of age, and for many years was one of the leading lawyers of Marion county, and was an uncle of Webster Holmes, who died here the early part of the present year. He was called here on a legal case.

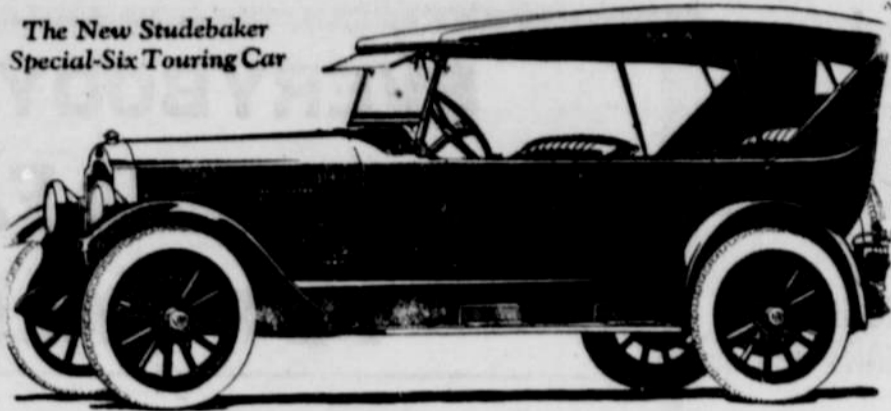

Miss Fay Boyer of Portland who was the guest of her friend Miss Elizabeth Neff at the Netherlands hotel for a few weeks past, returned home last Monday.

COOKING EXPERT WILL GIVE TALKS

After the judging in the culinary department at the coming fair, Mrs. W. J. Hill, superintendent, Mrs. McComb of Corvallis, who will do the judging, is scheduled to deliver a talk on Cooking, Canning and Baking. Those interested are invited to hear this address.
