CAN'T MAKE GRADE OVER CAPE LOOKOUT

For about three weeks past, a stout appearing young man has been camping at the northern base of Cape Lookout, south of Netarts. He also acted queerly, giving rise to the suspicion among settlers near the cape that he might be "balmy in the head" as the English would put it.

Complaint was made to Sheriff Aschim, who went out and brought the fellow in for examination. A physician examined him, and recommended that he be turned loose, so far as insanity was concerned, as evidently the fellow belonged more to the feeble minded family. When taken into custody, the man said he had been out of money for some time past. He lived on mussels gathered at low tide, near the cape, and occasionally, he varied the menu by swiping a few spuds from the near by farmers to fatten his bill of fare. He was possessed of an obsession that he must go south, but said the reason he tarried at Lookout, was that he could see no way to get around that elevation. He was told how to get around it, and tying on his oyster can and a few of his scanty belongings, took the road indicated by the Sheriff which would lead him somewhere toward the south pole— who knows where? Evidently, he belongs to a class who are afflicted with the hot-foot, and who always want to see what is just over and beyond the next hill.
