CRANBERRY HARVEST
LARGE ONE THIS YEAR

Cranberry harvesting is now in full blast in the cranberry bogs of Oregon and Washington. The crop this year locally will be a large one. The total which is grown on the Pacific Coast bogs will average better this year, as to size and general quality than in previous years. This is on account of the fact that the growers have found by experience that it is unprofitable to produce inferior grades of cranberries, and the poorer varieties have been largely supplanted by larger and better keeping, and consequently more readily marketable varieties. The trade, the consumer and the growers are thus benefited by the elimination of the poor grades.
Pickers are receiving twenty-five cents per peck for the berries, and if the berries hang more heavily on the vines, better money is earned by the pickers this year than last. While the bulk of the cranberries grown are consumed at holiday season, there is a demand for them throughout the entire fall season. Pacific coast cranberries are in general readily distinguished from their eastern cousins, in that they have a lighter cheek, a fact which is now well known to the trade and often demanded by the housewife, as it is claimed the Pacific coast cranberry needs less sugar. A few shipments are going forward at this time, but active shipments will not begin until the crop is completely harvested, which will be about the middle of October.

ARMORY BUILDING IS NOW UNDER WAY

Work on the new state armory here is being rapidly pushed through by the contractors Merrick, Chaffee & Heyd.
About a dozen men are now putting in the wood forms for the concrete work and it was expected to start pouring concrete yesterday afternoon for the foundation and basement walls.
According to the contract the state has for the building the armory is to be completed in February, barring bad weather. After the walls are poured and the roof is put on the finish on the interior of the building will probably be put in place rapidly.

The opening of the new coliseum theater took place last Tuesday evening with a dedicatory program. The special program lasted three evenings. Large crowds were in attendance at this function.

THE HIZZ COMPANY IS HERE

The Hizz company is showing in the city hall this week. They began Monday night last and will stay during the week. They are said to give a pleasing entertainment, and attract good sized crowds. It is a medicine company with vaudeville entertainment, and is one of a large number of such shows operating in the United States under a single incorporation.

PRISONERS WORK ON COUNTY ROADS

Eight prisoners confined in the county jail, are laboring on the road during the day. Three more are working about the court house in various capacities. The road workers prefer to be out in the open, instead of loafing down in the jail, and by working keep in good physical condition.

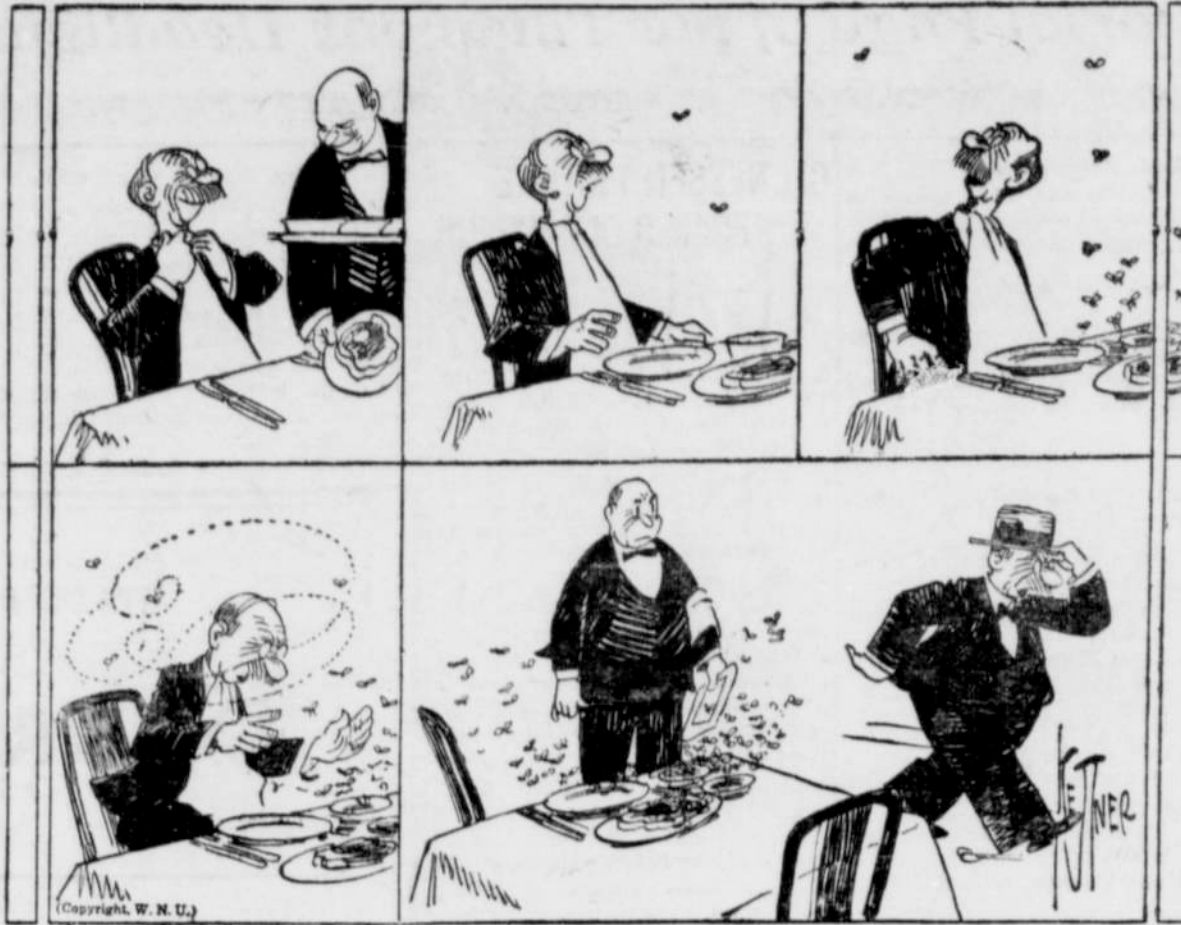

POINTERS ON TAXATION

To the editor: When the Oregon system was a burning political issue in the state, the taxpayers were confidently informed that it would reduce taxes, by those who sought to ride in office on that issue. Now it is conclusively proven that the Oregon system is responsible for the enormous amount of taxation that have been imposed upon the property owners of Oregon, and which is now the cause of so much discussion. That looks as if the people are beginning to get at the real thing when discussing high taxation. Advocates of the Oregon system are now few and far between, but it is going to be mighty hard to get the system out of our Oregon system of running state, county, city, and school affairs. There is very little hope that all the fuss now going on about high taxation will amount to anything as long as there is such a big army of tax eaters and the people demanding that the state, county, city, and school districts raise money by bonding and taxation for so many frills, or to provide jobs for those who are wanting to eat at the public pie counter.

If the tax levying bodies of Tillamook and the state as well, would cut out a lot of the frills and reduce to a minimum the overhead expenses then it might be possible to reduce taxation, but every tax levying body knows full well that it will raise a storm if they attempt to do so, even by some of those who complain about high taxation and plead that they be reduced to what they were before we had the Oregon system. Now which of our tax levying bodies have the nerve and back bone to cut out the frills and reduce the overhead expenses? Let's get down to business and insist that the tax levying bodies be no longer spendthrift maniacs, loading property owners down with heavy taxation. And, by way of information, how much more bonded indebtedness and taxation can Tillamook City stand, with our present system? And how can the city ever expect to become an industrial center with every now and again the people voting for more bonds and more taxation?
