

MEN WERE DISCOVERED

...suspicious that it might be worth investigating, and so posting the men about the house quietly, and with Lucas and Holden behind him, Aschim knocked at the door which was opened by Leslie Weygant. As Aschim entered the door swung to and a wooden latch fell in place, locking Aschim in. Failing to get in, Lucas and Holden edged around to a window and looked in. The sheriff accused Leslie Weygant, and told him that he had a warrant for his arrest. Weygant denied that he was the man. Aschim then started to investigate some stuff concealed under a tarpaulin, when Lucas shouted: "Look out for the man with the gun." Aschim wheeled, and discovered another man in the act drawing a gun from his hip pocket. But when he realized that he was covered from the outside, Weygant, a brother, and the bad man of the family, shoved his gun back of him and dropped it on a table. Aschim who then also had Lee Weygant covered, reached around the ex-convict and secured his gun. Lee Weygant started for the door, and Aschim realizing that he would open the door, let him go, but Weygant ran into Lucas, who ordered him to get back in the room, and he himself quickly followed. The other Weygant was not armed, and in one of the rooms was found the father of the Weygant boys, with a shotgun by his side, pretending to be asleep. Ed Stark was in the waiting Sheriff's room guarding a moonshiner and another prisoner seized in the raid at Garibaldi. Johnson stood outside near the rear of the cabin. Lee Weygant, the man who started to make the gun play, confessed that he alone had robbed the Yamhill store, but later owned up that he was assisted by his brother Leslie, and a considerable quantity of the loot was found under the tarpaulin, some of the boxes bearing the name of the Yamhill merchant. Leslie told Aschim that his brother had said "that he would not be taken alive," and it is believed that had not Lucas called out at the time, he would have shot Aschim, who had not at this time seen Lee Weygant, who was standing up against the front wall of the building near the door. As the elder Weygant started to draw his gun, Lucas drew a bed on him through the window, and then shouted to the Sheriff to "Look out." Lucas probably would have got in the first shot, but Aschim had not figured that the door would lock itself in closing, and Lucas was instructed to follow Aschim, which he could not do before the door swung shut.

Lee Weygant had recently served a term at McNeil's Island, and is a hardened criminal. He was convicted of robbing the Sheridan postoffice some years ago, and has been in prison several times. The younger brother, it is believed, was induced to commit the Yamhill crime through his brother, as he has never been in jail before. The father said he knew that the goods found over here were not paid for.

While the drama was being enacted in the shack, Gallagher of Garibaldi, charged with possession of liquor, who was being guarded by Stark in the auto, attempted to walk off, when Stark reached for his gun and told him to "quit it," which he did.

Sheriff Ferguson of Yamhill county and deputy Patterson came over Sunday morning and took the three Weygants out to McMinnville to answer to a charge of robbery, and of receiving stolen goods.

About three hundred dollars worth of goods were found by Aschim and his deputies, consisting of groceries, and other articles of various kinds. The Tillamook sheriff had had his eye on the three men who traveled in two autos, for several days, without knowing that they were the men wanted, and the fact that his suspicions were aroused by the men occupying the old shack on the highway, resulted in bagging the much wanted robbers.

HIGH SCHOOL

The senior class of 1923 presented the high school with two beautiful pictures painted by two eminent artists. Mabel Anderson had charge of the presentation, Noah Richards told the lives of the artists, and Cordelia Outfield unveiled the pictures. The cost of the pictures was about $40. One picture is placed in the front of the assembly room, and the other one is in the lower hall at the foot of the man stairway.

This entire week is being given to Christmas work in the sewing and cooking department. The sixth grade girls in the sewing class are making yarn dolls that are suitable gifts for babies. The seventh grade girls' sewing class is making "Aunt Dinahs" negro dolls. The high school sewing classes were making gingham dresses, but now they are making Christmas novelties, such as slipper trees, boudoir pillows, and powder jars, one of scraps of laces, silks, and ribbons.

All the cooking classes are devoting their time to Christmas candies.

The manual training classes are making Christmas presents such as cedar chests, oak library tables, book cases, writing desks, plant-stands, foot stools, toy animals, wheel stick horses, and many other things. One boy is making several small doors and drawers to be used in his new home. They are also making step ladders for use in the high school and grade school buildings and repairing school chairs and seats. The high school classes have class work for twenty or thirty minutes each day in lumber measuring, tool grinding, wood finishing, and estimating the number of shingles for buildings.

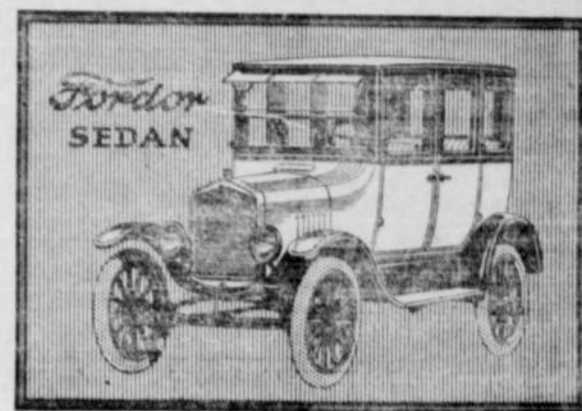

Those on the honor roll for the third month are Octavia Ware, Veda Smith, Muriel Wiley, Roletta Watson, Catherine Smith, Lunetta Pollock, Irene Lyster, Wanda Haltom, Rowena Hanson, Arlene Heyd, Mabel Anderson, Beatrice Sheldon, Agnes Arney, Elizabeth Briens, Camille Haltom, Edith Norberg, Corinne Stranhan, Lois Knight, Bernice Himes, Opal Hess, Fern Brownlee, Joseph Maxwell, Louis Himes, Carvis Artrip, Richard Goynes, Charles Thomas, and Joseph Heyd.

In the inter-class basket ball games played last week the seniors won. The scores were seniors-juniors 25-15; sophomores-freshmen 25-21; seniors-sophomores 25-6. The line up was: seniors—Wesley Tippin, Lewis Johnson, Warren Foland, Homer Blum, Verner Abplanalp, Victor Mathews, and Archie Pye; juniors—Frank Holden, Henry Himes, Carol Smith, Jim Harrison, and Asberry Minor; sophomores—Lloyd Johnson, Charles Thomas, John Gienger, Wade Jenkins, and Merle Frisbie; freshmen—

LaVant Holden, Donald Tone, Paul Gienger. The regular basket ball Page, Harold Procter, and Lenhart practice began this week.
