

A FEW REMARKS ON "GOING UP"

First produced as "The Aviator" in New York, December, 1910. New York Herald—"Everybody has taken the airman seriously until last night when James Montgomery's new comedy flew into the Astor Theatre and flew away with about all the laughter the audience could spare before going home. It was funny from beginning to end."

New York Sun—"The Aviator" is destined to become widely known... Mr. Montgomery's play proved just the sort of comic entertainment that New York audiences revel in."

When presented in musical comedy form as "Going Up," December, 1917, New York Tribune—"The amusing moments of 'Going Up' gather about the scenes in which Frank Craven talks about an airplane flight he never made."

New York Herald—"Going Up" scored a knockout at the Liberty Theatre. From the first scene until the curtain falls the players never lost their hold for one moment."

New York Times—"A large audience appeared to enjoy the play thoroughly from start to finish."

New York Sun—"Going Up" bids fair to stick close to Broadway for some time to come."

Norfolk (Va.) Ledger Dispatch—"Going Up" is a brand new release and came to the Wells unheralded. It turned out to be the best comedy in which popular Doug MacLean has appeared and one of the best ever shown on the silver sheet.—Adv.

The state highway will not agree to any such plan as outlined by the railroad and the people who are interested in the road project feel that the state is being imposed upon in the deal.

It is not possible to award any contract for the construction of the road until a satisfactory plan is approved and it may take several months more before that is done. The state highway commission, it is reported, will take immediate steps to negotiate their former plan with county has been drawing is nearly exhausted, the state cooperation in road matters will not have to be met by this county from funds originally provided for other projects. From now on the various road districts will receive their due amounts of road work, as allowed by the county budget, according to the county court. In fact, it was stated by the court that they intended to see that every estimate falls a bit short of the sum allowed, so there will be no apparent discrepancies upon which unscrupulous persons can hang a story of malfeasance.
