"Little Old New York," which is coming to the Liberty Theatre on May 1 for 3 days, arouses the thrill of pride and patriotism in America through the stirring scene where Robert Fulton launches the first steamboat and Old Glory goes fluttering to the masthead, pulled by the enthusiastic hands of young Patricia. It reveals with historical accuracy the New York of a century ago and against this interesting background pulses the story of a sweet young Irish girl's love for the young American aristocrat whom she has unwittingly supplanted as the heir to a big fortune. The struggles of Patricia to live up to the boyish role she has assumed and not to show any of her natural feminine traits is by turns comic and pathetic. It affords one of the most interesting characterizations ever essayed by a motion picture star.—Adv.

JANITOR DIES IN BANK BASEMENT

Robert McIntyre, aged 71 years, and janitor at the First National bank, Odd Fellows building, was discovered about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon, lying upon the floor of the basement of the above bank by two employees of the Tillamook transfer company, who had descended from the street to relieve a wood chute at the sidewalk which had become blocked from below. The men saw the janitor lying on the floor and immediately came up and notified Dr. J. E. Shearer, who went down and saw at once that the man was dead. The coroner was called and removed the body to the morgue.

It is believed that death resulted from heart failure. The last time McIntyre was seen alive was at about 2 p. m. His corpse was discovered at about 4 p. m., and death must have resulted between those hours.

People well acquainted with deceased here, state that he had no relatives in this city, but that he has a brother in Talent, Linn county. McIntyre was a Canadian, and was also a widower. Chief White notified the authorities at Talent to look up and apprise the brother of the death.

Partly on the strength of the mistake that has been laid at the clerk's door, and the agitation which has been caused by the incident, other candidates are expected to file for the position. A strong following has been assured another man by influential farmers and business men who believe that Mr. Brimhall is too weak a man for such an important job.

On the other hand, friends of Clerk Brimhall, to the extent of quite a large number, are not particularly anxious to see him run for another term on account of the condition of his health.

One small crowd of indignant farmers was heard discussing the fair money rumpus Wednesday, and one was heard to state that he didn't believe that the item was omitted by Clerk Brimhall by accident.

At any rate, watch for the fine

Henry Butler of Bay City, being one of the promoters, was present, and a committee of three local people was appointed to work with him. As we have an ideal place for a natatorium there should be no trouble to secure ample funds to finance the proposition.

Although the day of the automobile is with us old dobbin seems to be coming back; horseback riding being the most popular sport last season. The owner of the stable at rockaway has added several more horses to his bunch and will be at the old stand this season.
