POLITICAL WINDUP OCCURS TONIGHT

Issues Greatly Confused This Year and Parties Broken Up

HEAVY VOTE EXPECTED

Final Results Hard to Predict by Reason of Voters Not Expressing Selves

Today the people of the state will show their pleasure and displeasure for certain candidates who are looking for nomination to office. When the votes are counted this evening the uncertainty and suspense in which many candidates have been living for several weeks past will be ended and they will be allowed to sleep soundly again.

Politics in Tillamook county this year have been greatly confused, owing to the mixing of issues, which has kept many voters on the fence in an undecided state of mind for some time past. Probably this will finally result in a heavy ballot being cast.

Up to the last minute the chances for the candidates for some of the county offices seem still very vague and positive predictions are risky to make.

The outcome of the race for sheriff is hard to determine, as contrary reports are heard from different parts of the county.

For county clerk, J. C. McClure has made great strides over his opponent, S. Brimhall, in the past week or so and chances are very bright for his nomination. In 1920 this pair were the race and Brimhall beat McClure by a few over sixty votes. It is expected that if Brimhall succeeds in getting the nomination this time he will be an independent candidate out before the November election.

Just how the contest between George and the contest between George and representative will end is also hard to determine. Both are working hard for the place. The opinion has been expressed that Hawkins filed for nomination at an unfortunate time, on account of the agitation in this county about timbermen. While Mr. Hawkins is not strictly a timberman, the sense generally understood (Continued on page 8)

In the afternoon the parade will be in form and march to the cemetery for the decoration of graves.

With the passing years the Grand Army ranks are being rapidly thinned. This year it is thought that about 25 per cent of the old veterans will participate in the services.

LOCAL BEE KEEPING DECLARED POSSIBLE

Bee Expert Discovers that Foul Broods are Cause of Local Hives Dying

H. A. Scullen, of the staff of the Oregon Agricultural college, went to Nehalem Saturday with County Agent Pine where they held a meeting at the Union high school where Mr. Scullen lectured on the keeping and care of bees.

From this meeting Mr. Scullen and Mr. Pine went to visit several farms in the vicinity which keep bees.

In the past few years over sixty per cent of the bees in the north end of the county have died. After investigation Mr. Scullen discovered that this was caused by a complication of European and American foul broods. An inspector for the north end of Tillamook county was recommended, who would clean up these broods.

Mr. Scullen stated that Tillamook county had great possibilities as a bee country, as the burned over land here produced much fire weed, which is the best honey producing plant known on the Pacific Coast. Until the foul broods are destroyed, however, the bee expert said, there was no use trying to concentrate on bees in Tillamook.

TILLAMOOK CHEESE STILL HOLDS TOP

Wisconsin Market Shows Advance, With Lower Price this Year

MILK RECEIPTS HEAVY

Tillamook Creamery Sends Milk to Other Factories on Account of Over Supply

The cheese market is reported as not likely to go any lower than 24 cents, Tillamook, because to date 7200 boxes have been sold for storage and not delivered. This will take care of the surplus stock for several weeks to come. Wisconsin showed an advance last week, longhorns now being quoted at 17 1-4 cents and dairies at 17 7-8 cents. While this is 3 cents lower than last year, it is 2 cents higher than the low price reached on April 18, this year.

It will be pleasing to the dairymen of Tillamook to feel that cheese will not go below 24 cents Tillamook, as that will show a fair average price for the season.

Milk receipts at the various factories are heavier than ever before, and the Tillamook creamery has had to and milk to the South Prairie, Maple Leaf, Holstein, and Fairview factories. It is still getting nearly 37,000 pounds of milk daily. Maple Leaf and Holstein are each getting about 32,000 pounds, and South Prairie, 24,500 pounds daily.
