

REVIEW OF THE SKYLINE TRAIL

(Contributed to the Headlight) When we picked up the tan and skyblue bound volume of western poetry "The Skyline Trail" by Mary Carolyn Davies, we confess to a feeling of satisfaction that the publishers had planned the book by this well known young Oregon poet with such care and discrimination.

The exquisitely etched illustration of "The Poets' Corner" by another of Oregon's gifted daughters, Florenz Clark, served to increase our feeling of pleasure in handling a beautiful book.

"The Skyline Trail" in which Miss Davies sings of the west, of Oregon, of the lure of high places, the tang and flavor of mountain trail, of the joys of gypsy trail, of the gallant bravery of the cowboy who jests with death, that you and I may laugh, is a rare combination of real poetry and adventuresome, gay western spirit.

How appropriate then that the publishers, who convinced that this daughter of Oregon caught in words the western spirit and flavor as no one ever has done before, have issued not only usual "trade" edition, but also a special Oregon edition limited to 1,000 copies, numbered and autographed. There is but little doubt that this unique edition is destined to be sold out entirely and to find an active place on the list of Oregonians that advance in price owing to the fact that bibliophiles and collectors are constantly on the watch for rare Oregon material.

It is real poetry. It is an expression of the western spirit. It is Oregon poetry, and a part of you and me. Just listen to this:

Autumn in Oregon—I'll never see Those hills again, a blur of blue and rain Across the Willamette. I'll not stir A pheasant as I walk and hear it whir Above by head, an indolent, trusting thing. When all this silly dream is finished here, The fellows will go home, to where there fall Rose-petals over every street, and all The year is like a friendly festival. But I shall never watch those hedges drip Color, nor see the tall spar of a ship In our harbor—They say that I am dying Perhaps that's why it all comes back again;

Autumn in Oregon, and pheasants flying— How well this child of the pioneers understands her cowboys, those picturesque and fast disappearing figures who mark the last frontier and who will soon be gone—forever! At the end of the trail, wherever it be, When death draws rein to speak to me With "Howdy, partner!" I hope I'll grin Easy, and stop awhile and chin, And roll a smoke, though it may be fakin', Without him knowin' my hands is shakin'.

And I've taken my blows, and I've had my fun, And I won't mind knowing that Life is done, For there's never a trail but has an end, And how do I know Death's not a friend Waiting to give me a comrade's hail, Where he's pitched our camp at the end of the trail? And what strength in these lines: This land is a great sea; Out of it me— And into it at the end.

It is my friend, My lover and enemy— My mother and lover and friend; My master and slave.

It gave All that I have, and it will take away All that I have, and even my life, some day. The ocean is a friend, who, for awhile Will talk to me, and smile; But always with a stranger's courtesy.

The land is maker and lover and slayer of me. And now by way of contrast get the lilt, the gypsy, the feel of the itching in "Gypsy Weather".

When there's a yellow sun on the hill And a wind as light as a feather And the clouds frisk daily, as young clouds will, Oh, then it is gypsy weather! That's the weather to travel in, skin, With the sun and wind against your No matter how glad to rest you've been, You must go when it's gypsy weather.

The hands of a house can never hold A man when it's gypsy weather, A town's too prim, and a town's too cold

For a maid when her heart's like a feather! Then hark to the words that your pulses say And put your hand in my own today And we'll follow the road as it winds away; And we'll look at the world together! The Skyline Trail is the fourteenth published volume by Mary Carolyn Davies, all verse except one—a novel—"The Husband Test." Miss Davies recently won the $100 prize in the circuit rider poetry contest. The prize winning poem is incorporated in this volume, which is dedicated to the pioneers— Oh, PIONEERS, that live within this brain And body; drivers of the slow ox-train, Settlers who built with muscle, axe, and gun, Neighbors to danger, friends of plain and sun; Let me find unknown worlds, nor be content Till I, too, have with pain and slow torment, Stumbled across some trackless continent.
