MEARS' FIRST KEEPER VISITS

Captain A. P. C. Hald, who has recently been retired from the government light-house service, after having served the required thirty-five years, was the first assistant at the Cape Mears light-house when it opened thirty-two years ago. Soon afterward he was given complete charge, which position he held for several years. While at this station Captain Hald made many friends in Tillamook and vicinity, coming in to the city by sail boat from the sand-spit. At one time he found that the water in Hoquiam slough had risen till it flooded some of the lower streets of the city. Mr. Hald came to the Cape Mears light-house from Cape Flattery. From here he went to Heceta head, finishing his term at the Umpqua river light, at which place it is recorded that he lighted the first light for that place. He and his wife are living in Oakland, California, but still like the looks of the Oregon coast, and never fail to remind the people of California that Oregon weather is as mild as any on the coast. They are visiting at the home of F. J. Pye, who with his father helped Mr. Hald at the time of his former residence here.

The captain was anxious to have a visit with one of his early associates, a young man who had learned the business of light keeping from him at the Cape Mears light. This man is Howard Carey, well known to old-timers as a young business man of this city. Fortune smiled on both men when they met in Tillamook, Monday, after thirty years apart. Mr. Carey is visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. Henry Wolf. He is keeper of the light at Point No-Point on Puget Sound.

Frank Karl Strueby, age 65, died at his home in Garibaldi last Monday, after an illness of some length. He had lived in Oregon for 20 years, all but one of which had been spent at Garibaldi on his farm. Mr. Strueby was born in Brunnen, Switzerland, having come to America 41 years ago. He is survived by his widow, five daughters, Mrs. Antone Lagler of Garibaldi, Mrs. John Weber of Tillamook, Misses Henrika, Caroline and Marie Strueby of Portland and a son, Frank Strueby of San Francisco. Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Sacred Heart church in this city, with burial in the Catholic cemetery.

The National Exposition of Mines and Mining Equipment is to be held in Sacramento the week of September 29th-October 4th in connection with the twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Mining Congress. The exposition will be open to the public and is expected to draw to Sacramento many not connected with the mining industry, because of its educational value. There will be demonstrations of how miners actually work far under ground and the United States Bureau of Mines will stage a demonstration of how miners are rescued when a great disaster occurs. Manufacturers throughout the country are interested in the success of the exposition and more than half the available exhibit space has already been contracted for. Mining counties of California are arranging to place comprehensive displays of their mineral and metal resources.

DONATED LAND TO BE ACCEPTED

The acceptance of donations, by the government, of privately owned land suitable for forest growing, is one of the important provisions of the recently enacted Carke-McNary Bill, according to C. J. Buck, assistant district forester, in charge of lands work in the North Pacific district of the Forest Service.

"For the past several years," said Mr. Buck, "a number of private owners interested in forestry have attempted to donate cut-over land to the Forest Service. Their object in doing this was to be sure that such cut-over land would be given fire protection, and the proper forestry methods applied so that a second crop of timber could be produced. Strange though it may seem, there has heretofore been no method whereby the government could accept such donations. Section 7 of the new forestry act now makes this procedure possible."

Some of the outstanding features of the section, according to Mr. Buck, are that the land must be chiefly valuable for growing timber and that it be in such units of size and location as to be capable of economical and effective administration for national forest purposes. It is not necessary that the donated land shall be within an existing national forest, nor upon the watershed of a navigable stream.

AMERICAN VICE-COUNCIL SLAIN IN PERSIA

Upon receiving official confirmation of the killing of Robert W. Imbrie, American vice-consul at Teheran, the United States government prepared vigorous action to secure amends for the murder. Confirmation of the killing of Imbrie arrived at the state department from the American legation at Teheran. The murder of Major Imbrie occurred at 5 p. m. Friday and was perpetrated by a mob made fanatical by the recent agitation against foreigners.

Major Robert W. Imbrie, American vice-consul, was beaten to death by a native mob. The Persians resented an attempt by Major Imbrie to photograph a so-called "magic fountain" of which the natives stand in awe. Melin Seymour, an American who was with the vice-consul, was severely wounded and is in a hospital. He is not expected to recover. Later reports state that the Persian government deeply regrets the occurrence, are investigating, and will abide by any reasonable diplomatic reparations.

Mute Messengers of a Nation

IN AN underground telephone cable scarcely thicker than a man's wrist there are 2400 threadlike copper wires, each pair providing a path for instant speech.

These highways of the spoken word, buried beneath many an American city, are carrying thousands of voices simultaneously from office to factory and some from coast to coast.

If released from their copper carriers, these messages would sound a Babel, in which none could be heard. Confusion beyond description would reign if this unhindered speech, now hushed by science in tiny strands, were voiced aloud.

An average of 54,000,000 telephone conversations speed daily over the wires of the Bell System. By hundreds in cables, by dozens in the open wires, they travel in silence side by side, to find voice again only at their journey's end.

Muted as they pass from telephone to telephone, they weave the pattern of the nation's life.
