THE BOGY OF FINANCIAL DEPRESSION

The country of the Northwest appears to be suffering from a complex somewhat akin to the inferiority species, which persuades the people of this section, probably not against their wills, to believe that some sort of financial depression is taking place. Just why there should be this alleged depression is not so readily apparent. Old timers say that "hard times" always precede a presidential election. Their fathers told them that, so it must be true. They say the reason for this is that people are afraid to spend their money until they see who is going to be elected. Presumably people stop eating and wearing out clothes until the presidential question is settled. Also we will have to presume that everything else comes to a standstill, and people simply stand in suspense, with their mouths open, waiting for the awesome event to take place. Haven't you noticed them doing that?

It is said that Babson, the financial statistician, has made an exhaustive investigation of the present situation and has been unable to find a single cause for the so-called depression outside of the psychological one, that of the mass of people simply thinking there ought to be hard times—so there are such. It is the will of the people, the supreme will of this nation.

Apparently, then, it is up to the ones causing the trouble to cure it, and cure it the same way it was caused—by changing their minds. It ought to be a simple matter. Lots of people change their minds every day. Another possible reason for the mental (not financial) depression is that it has been the policy of political parties for generations to create this boggy among the voters, either to persuade them to keep their party in power or to throw the other one out. Of course every statement political parties make is true, they always are, and the "dear peepul" fall into line and raise the prescribed chant of "hard times." It all works out very nicely.

Right in Tillamook county alone there are nearly fifteen thousand people who must eat, be clothed and housed, and part of whom at least are producing materials and wares to be sent away for other people to eat and be housed with. But, of course there are hard times because the president hasn't been elected yet and the politicians tell us there must be. Within the past few months a half a million dollars has been spent for building purposes in the county, but don't forget for a minute that there are hard times.

Milk and cheese production this year is away above that of last year in this county, and it seems like things OUGHT to be all right, but just keep it in your mind that there are hard times, and don't forget it.

SOMETHING ELSE TO CONSIDER
Some interested Tillamook people have discovered that there appears to be a wonderful possibility for bulb growing in this county. From what we can learn the importation of foreign bulbs will be stopped soon on account of pests, which will throw the whole of the demand on growers in the United States. Judging from the prices one has to pay for a few flower bulbs there ought to be a good profit in them. If there is such a profit, and we are assured there is, why is it we don't get busy here and raise a few acres. From what we can learn tulip, daffodil and hyacinth bulbs have old Bossy backed off the map as a money maker. It is worth looking into.

DON'T FORGET THAT WE WANT A FAIR NEXT YEAR

The measure to make an appropriation to improve the new fair grounds will go on the ballot again this year, after having passed the voters once and having become messed up so it was not put on the county budget. People were in favor of the tax then and they are in favor of it now, for they realize the value of our county fairs as being instructive to both young and old, and as an incentive to better work. In the remote possibility that the measure will not pass it is very likely that Tillamook will not have a fair next year, on account of the old buildings being in such a condition that it is hardly worth while to repair them.

Press Comment

Coos county cheese won first and second places over all competitors including the highly advertised product of the Tillamook district, at the state fair at Salem this year. Mellowest cheese made by the Coos Bay Mutual factory scored 95 1-2 while an entry from Broadbent scored 95. The third and fourth places were given Tillamook on scores of 94 1-2 and 94. This is considered by impartial authorities to be no more than is coming to the Coos county product as the cheese from this section has been equal to any that is produced on the Pacific coast for several years. On the markets it does not command as high a price solely on account of the demand that has been created for other brands through the consistent advertising paid for by the dairymen in the better organized districts.—Western World.

BETTER HAVE AN AGENT

If Coos county can go out to the state fair and capture first and second prizes in cheese-making without a county agent, it is evidence that there is something to Coos county as a dairying district. Tillamook, the much advertised and self-satisfied cheese county, was caught napping and thought she could take the prizes for cheese. If the county, unorganized and without the help of a special agent, can take first prizes in dairy products, what could she do with all the dairymen working together and having the advantage of a specialist? The answer is not obscure. To a very few is the credit due for again bringing Coos county to the fore in cheese-making. Capture of that prize was probably worth $10,000 to Joe Larson, simply as a matter of satisfaction. Mr. Larson has argued until he was black in the face, to bring about more community spirit in marketing and manufacturing dairy products, without result, however, save from his own individual efforts. Now that the die is cast, it behooves every dairymen in the county to get solidly behind the movement for a county agent, and if one is secured and found wanting, oust him. Coos county is able to take care of herself in any dairying project, with just a little cooperation which can only be had by an agent who can visit ranchers where they are falling down. The county needs a Jay Smith to browse around and criticize the dairying slackers.—Coos Bay Harbor.

Correspondence

CALLS ATTENTION TO COOS CHEESE
Editor Headlight: Whenever one thinks of cheese they think of Tillamook. When you are in Tillamook you look for the label "on the Ring". In reading Mr. Haberlach's article in your issue of September 26th the outstanding idea is that Tillamook is about the only section in the northwest that produces cheese and the only section that gets 10c a pound more than any other section. The statement is not strong enough to hide the fact that Coos county makes a few cheese and that Coos county has discovered that there appears to be a wonderful possibility for bulb growing in this county. From what we can learn the importation of for-had his advertising revert to Tillamook county, at any rate. He might have been fair enough to say that Coos and some other sections produce cheese and that under the Mellowest rine was found a product superior to the Tillamook. L. H. BRAKEL
