

SCHOOL HEADS MEET

(Continued from page 1) held and a program given at which baskets were sold. The baskets netted $199.78. This school has bought a fine phonograph, many valuable records, basketball suits, and other needed things. This school is building up rapidly under the direction of E. G. Bailey. The grades of the Cloverdale school gave a Thanksgiving program before the high school students and parents which was in keeping with the excellent manner in which they usually plan those things.

Owing to an increase in the enrollment in the Wheeler schools the board finds it necessary to add another teacher to the teaching staff in the grades.

Next Saturday the second meeting of the Tillamook county teachers' association will meet at Cloverdale. Dr. H. L. Hopkins of Pacific university of Forest Grove will be the principle speaker of the day. Other local teachers will take part.

The teachers' examinations are scheduled to be held the 17, 18, 19, and 20 of this month.

EARLY SETTLEMENT OF TILLAMOOK COUNTY

(Continued from page 7) greased her ways, and at the signal the block was knocked away and she slid into the water, and rode like a duck, and as there was an east wind we set her sails and started for the Columbia river, as we thought without more trouble, but misfortunes will befall the best at times.

Sam Howard acted as pilot, he having passed in and out on several occasions. He was steering for the old channel just below Kilchis Point, when we ran hard aground. We at once got our boat out and began sounding, and found we were 300 feet away from the channel. The extraordinary high water and swift current had entirely changed the channel from its original course and formed more south. We continued sounding down the bay and found the channel had moved south of the rocks below Garibaldi known as the sow and pigs. At that time the channel running across E. and W. was not there. It was cut through the following winter. The old original channel ran up where now stands the Truckee mill wharf, and Linewebber's cannery, up past Eastbrooks point, thence bearing S. E. to near where the old wharf below Comer's mill stands, thence S. W. across straight towards a good mark on the top of the hill, to be seen to this day, viz: a gap between the trees the channel was straight and a good one. At that time there was three fathoms of water in the channel at high tide, now there is scarcely two feet of water at low tide at the same place, since the change of the channel further south the inside one has been gradually filling up every year. It appears to me that some effort should be made to have the water turned back into the old channel on this side of the bay. I have no doubt it will be done some day, but if it could be done at an early date it would be of incalculable benefit to Bay City, the water would soon make a deep channel as good as the old one was. Well as we found everything so much changed we now knew how to steer. We returned to the schooner, the anchor had been picked up and taken out to the channel, and we had to wait for water. That evening, at high tide she floated over into the channel and we all felt happy once more.

In the morning we were up bright and early and headed our schooner for the mouth of the bay, where we had to take in ballast. We of course had no freight to take out, so had to ballast off the shore. We, however, dug about ten bushels of clams, and took aboard. We then filled our tank with fresh water and were then ready for sea. Early next morning we set sail for Astoria in dead earnest. We had a rather strong northwest wind, and we sailed out of the bay and over the bar with fine spirits, but we found we had not enough ballast and against such strong headwind we could make scarcely any headway. Another thing was that her main boom was too short by about six or eight feet. We had to lie outside that night, but the next morning found us close to the Columbia river bar and the wind shifting into the east we had to beat in over the bar, which was very smooth. Here we met the Revenue cutter "Corwin," coming from Astoria. She came close to us and took a good look at our craft. I guess they thought we were some phantom ship or the Flying Dutchman for they had quite a number of glasses leveled at us. We must have presented a very odd spectacle for we had not even the color of any paint on her, and the pitch on her seams had not been scraped off.
