Studebaker

"Yes, our new wagon's a Studebaker — the only kind we KNOW"

"The Studebaker idea has been in our family for sixty years. We have never thought of buying any other kind of a wagon."

"It's true, we're continually being offered other wagons costing a little less, with lots of promises as to what they will do. But we know in our family what a Studebaker will do. A few dollars difference in price doesn't mean much. It's the service a wagon gives that we consider most."

"Long service for a fair price means more every time than short service for a few dollars less."

"That's why we stick to Studebaker—and 'Stick to Studebaker' is a pretty good motto for a man who uses wagons."

"Studebaker wagons are built of good stuff. They're made right by people who've had years and years of experience in making them right—people who are trusted the world over."

"Studebaker wagons last, because they're made to last."

"Look out for the dealer who tells you his wagon is just as good as a Studebaker. That's my advice after a good deal of experience—and the experience of all of my people. You get a Studebaker and you've got a safe investment."

DAIRY NOTES.

From Western Farmer:

"Milking a Cow Up."

Almost any one can milk a cow down, or, in other words, dry; but very few believe that one which has gone through this vexatious experience can be restored to her milk. I have just passed through a very bitter experience along this line, and as the recently learned truth is easiest taught, I will relate some of the "field notes" in the case.

I was milking a cow that was giving twenty-three pounds daily when I turned her over to other milkers on the 28th of February, and she was normally falling off in milk at the rate of one pound in 16 days. When I took charge of her again, on the 5th of April, she was down to six pounds a day, and was producing no good. I began treating her with corn chop, bran, stover, flax seed meal, salt, hay, clear water and petting. She began to mend in her milk right away. On the 20th inst. she gave 16 pounds. Yesterday she gave 16.5 pounds. On this 22nd of April, she gave 17 pounds, down weight! She has been having a little green stuff for the past week.

I find that the Danish custom of manipulating the udder after all the milk has apparently been taken is productive of good results. Quite a little very rich milk is obtained "after you are done" by mildly but firmly kneading the udder for three or four minutes. Such action seems to displace milk that had a tendency to hide in cavities of the udder and remain till next time. This holding over seems to have a bad effect. The "hunching" of the calf is certainly scientific, if it is severe. It would not be best for you to risk an exercise as vigorously as the calf does.—A. M. Jones, King Co., Wash.

The Skim Milk Calf.
E. V. Ellington.

One of the phases of the dairy industry that is more or less neglected in the Northwest is the raising of the heifer calf. In these newer settled sections the farmers are not financially able to go into the dairy districts and buy their herds outright; and even if they were so situated this would not be advisable because of the risk of importing inferior cattle. Therefore, the more permanent system, although somewhat slower, is to raise the heifer calves from the best cows.

Young animals require food that will make rapid bone and muscle growth and in milk we have such a feed. There is a difference of opinion as to the length of the time the calf should remain with its mother. It is becoming more and more customary to remove the calf within 48 hours. Whatever method is followed the calf should have the first milk or the colostrum from its mother, as it has slightly purgative effect which acts beneficially on the digestive tract and if the best results are to be obtained this colostrum should not be withheld.

For the first week or two five or six quarts of its mother's milk a day is all a calf should be allowed to have, and this should be given two or three times a day three being better than two, as the calf's stomach is not large and an excessive amount of milk at one time results in indigestion and scours.

As the calf grows older somewhat more milk can be used, but at no time does it need more than 16 or 18 pounds per day. Any time between ten days and 2 weeks skim milk may be substituted in part for whole milk, and in about ten or twelve days after beginning this substitution, skim milk may replace the whole milk altogether.

When the calf is two or three weeks old a little whole corn or oats in a box where calves will get it will be eaten. The calf will soon eat hay. It is well to use alfalfa-clover hay or legumes of some sort. The aim is to keep the calves growing.

At the age of four to six months, skim milk may be dropped out of the ration and at this time the grain should be increased.

In the rearing of calves, keep the feeding utensils absolutely clean, feed the milk warm, and do not overfeed. If these rules are followed little digestive disorder will result.
