BRIEF NEWS OF OREGON

Wool sales at Condon aggregated 700,000 pounds, at prices ranging from 10 1/2 to 14 7/8 cents.

Thieves broke into the clothing store of John Anderson in Forest Grove and made away with about 50 suits valued at over $700.

The farmers of Ashland have perfected a producers' association, and the question of establishing a public market there is being canvassed.

Accused of tying a bunch of straw to a horse's tail and setting fire to it, at St. Johns, Otto Russell was fined $10 and costs for cruelty to animals.

Judge M. C. George was elected president of the Sons and Daughters of Oregon Pioneers, at the annual meeting at Portland.

Jay H. Upton, of Portland, was elected department commander of the United Spanish War Veterans and Socialism was chosen as the place of next meeting.

By an oversight in enacting a new law dealing with conditions that were disclosed by Portland's vice clique scandal the defendants in these cases will go unpunished.

The county court has appropriated $750 to be used in defraying the expense of assembling a creditable exhibit of Douglas county products at the state fair at Salem in September.

A Willows county grand jury has reported that two drug stores in the "dry" district at Enterprise have filled during 10 months 10,700 prescriptions for intoxicating liquors, or an aggregate of over 2000 gallons.

According to a report of the state market inspector filed at Roseburg, the Oregon Soldiers' Home scored 97.5 out of a possible 100. The inspector says this is the highest score recorded by any state institution in Oregon.

Guarded by three forts and strings of electrically controlled mines which extend from the Oregon to Washington shores, defenses at the mouth of the Columbia are considered as good as any which protect the harbors of the United States.

The Oregon Bankers' association session at Corvallis, elected W. L. Thompson of Pendleton as president for the ensuing year. The bankers decided to cooperate in the movement toward securing large tracts of land for colonization purposes.

Governor West has appointed Ernest Ringo, a Salem lawyer, special agent and prosecutor for the governor's office, under a law passed many years ago. A law passed at the last session appropriated $1000 a year for the work.

A solid gold nugget worth $1500 was panned by George Armstrong and Richard Sturton on their Dutch Gulch placer claim three miles from Susanville and 60 miles from Baker. It is thought to be the largest nugget ever found in the northwest.

The first apportionment made by the state under laws passed by the last legislature was received by County Treasurer Lewis. The apportionment amounts to $10,173.45 and is to be used by the agricultural society which has charge of the annual county fair in Multnomah county.

Arguments were heard in the supreme court in the suit brought by L. H. McMahan, a Salem lawyer, to restrain Secretary of State Olcott and State Treasurer Kay from expending $450,000 appropriated by the legislature for the reclamation of lands in the Columbia Southern project.

No longer will producers be able to market their fruits in Oregon under misleading labels, if the efforts of State Dairy and Food Commissioner Mieleck avail. This official has begun action to eliminate this bad feature of the trade in an effort to aid the grower who puts up an honest pack.

Lizzie Clark has brought suit at Hillsboro against Hare & Gilkerson, sawmill men of Manning, to recover $15,000 damages. The plaintiff is a cook, and complains that she was buried in the debris of a tree which the defendants' workmen felled across a cookhouse which she occupied. She alleges that she was permanently disabled, and may lose her eyesight as a result of her injuries.

To make a study of the mineral resources of Oregon and induce capital to develop them, is the object of a bill passed by the legislature creating the Oregon Bureau of Mines and Geology, and the prediction is made that it will increase the elemental wealth of the state by millions of dollars, for estimates place the value on the importations of clay products alone at $5,000,000 annually, and the importations of cement, building stone and other building materials also run into millions yearly.

A synopsis of the game and fish laws of the state of Oregon has been issued by William L. Finley, state fish and game warden. The pamphlets will be distributed among the gun stores throughout the city and state. Will G. Steel, who will take up the office of superintendent of Crater Lake Park on July 1, will work in conjunction with Mr. Finley in making Crater Lake Park a big game refuge as well as a place of scenic beauty. An effort will be made to get a number of European birds into the park.
