TUESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1913.

On Thursday evening of last week Mrs. Edyth Tezzer Wetherford, representing the Oregon Manufacturers' Association, met a few of the business men of the city at the Commercial Club rooms and talked on the subject of patronizing Oregon made products. Her coming was unannounced and for that reason there was not as large a crowd as there should have been. She advocated patronizing home industries from a local county, and state standpoint. Her talk was entertaining and instructive. She works chiefly among the women who buy 90 per cent of the goods consumed in the households. It is very easy to see where Mrs. Tezzer is carrying on a work that will be of vast importance to the state. She expects to visit us again in the near future, when, we are sure she will receive a larger audience.

Another fire scare took place last Saturday when fire caught in the roof of the Dahlgren photograph gallery. The fire was discovered in time and put out before any damage to speak of was done. This is the third time that fire has started in that locality this summer, and it is thought they were started from sparks coming from the smokestack of the Coates Lumber Co. saw mill, the smokestack not being properly hooded. An endeavor has been made to have the company attend to the matter and see that a spark catcher is placed on the smoke stack but to no avail. The company should look after this matter at once and not let another day pass without giving the public the protection due it. We all realize what a calamity it would be should we be stricken with a bad fire, and it seems that the Coates Lumber Company is taking undue liberties in not having their smoke stacks properly hooded.

COMMUNICATION.

Editor Herald:

Looking over the last issue of your paper I noticed in the announcements of the services to be held in the Presbyterian Church that Mr. MacKenzie was and is contributing his best efforts towards wiping "Popery" off the face of the earth. No doubt the Rev. gentleman and those "who shouted for more" are fired to saving the country from the "beast" by some of the infamous productions of our present day press and consider it their imperative duty to warn the people against the great danger that threatens the liberties, and the very existence of the great republic. Well may the people of Tillamook be thankful to have such wise and long-headed preachers as Mr. MacKenzie in their midst. It is unfortunate for him that his colleague Mr. Kuhlman, who sometime ago announced in the columns of the Herald that in his opinion "there might yet be hope for the Pope of Rome since he was reported to have given up smoking" is in Portland investigating social conditions and seeing for himself how conditions in Portland compare with those in Tillamook, otherwise he would have a valuable assistant in his great campaign of unmercifully unmasking Popery. There is just now going over the country one of those periodical waves of bigotry, and a campaign of calumny and misrepresentation is carried on by a number of vile and immoral sheets such as "the menace" to deceive the American people and to crush, if possible, out of existence the Catholic Church.

If history offers any warning or teaches any lesson, it is this great truth, that persecution and misrepresentation and slander have never yet put down a good cause nor materially served a bad one. Truth may be obscured or smothered for a time; it cannot be destroyed. For more than eighteen centuries the Catholic Church has stood a tower of strength, amidst the ruins of all earthly things, strewn in her pathway. Thrones have fallen and sceptres have been broken around her, yet has she stood and she still stands, stronger than ever. "There is not," writes Lord McCaulay in his essay on Rank's "History of the Popes," "and there never was on this earth a work so well deserving of examination as the Roman Catholic Church. The history of that Church joins together the two great ages of human civilization."

No other institution is left standing which carries the mind back to the times when the smoke of sacrifice rose from the Pantheon and when camels and tigers bounded in the Flavian amphitheatre. The proudest royal houses are but yesterday when compared with the line of the supreme Pontiffs. That line we trace back in an unbroken series from the Pope who crowned Napoleon in the 19th century to the Pope who crowned Pepin in the 8th; and far beyond the time of Pepin the august dynasty extends till it is lost in the twilight of fable. The republic of Venice came next in antiquity. But the Republic of Venice was modern when compared to the Papacy and the Republic of Venice is gone and the Papacy remains, not in decay, not a mere antique, but full of life and youthful vigor. The Catholic Church is still sending forth to the farthest ends of the world missionaries as zealous as those who landed in Kent with Augustin and still confronting hostile Kings with the same spirit with which she confronted Attila. Her acquisitions in the New World have more than compensated for what she lost in the Old. Her spiritual ascendancy extends over the vast countries which lie between the plains of the Missouri and Cape Horn, countries which, a century hence may not improbably contain a population as large as that which now inhabits Europe. Nor do we see any sign which indicates that the term of her long dominion is approaching.

She saw the commencement of all the governments and of all the ecclesiastical establishments that now exist in the world; and we feel no assurance that she is not destined to see the end of them all. She was great and respected before the Saxon had set foot on Britain, before the Frank had passed the Rhine, when Grecian eloquence still flourished at Antioch, when idols were still worshipped in the temple of Mecca. And she may still exist in undiminished vigor when some traveller from New Zealand shall in the midst of a vast solitude take his stand on a broken arch of London bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's. When we reflect on the tremendous assaults she has survived we find it difficult to conceive in what way she is to perish.

Nothing could, in fact, be more honorable to the Catholic Church than the warfare which has been lately adopted to effect her ruin in this country. In appealing to passion and by the necessity under which they find themselves to resort to misrepresentation and slander her enemies virtually acknowledge that calm examination and sober reasoning are powerless for her destruction; they generally damage their own cause in the judgment of all calm and impartial men, while the party assailed by such weapons is always sure to win sympathy and to gain on public opinion. Who are those who are carrying on this campaign of slander against the Catholic Church? They are for the most part men who, while professing to be the champions of freedom have for their secret and even avowed object to rob of freedom a large portion of their fellow citizens; for their war against "Popery" means nothing less than this. Professing to love the Bible they trample recklessly upon the most cherished principles of the Bible. The Bible says "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself"; they say, we must hate our neighbor and declare war to the hilt against him, if he happens to belong to the oldest and the most numerous body of Christians on the face of the earth. The Bible teaches that we must love our enemies; they hate even their friends or those at least who never wronged them in thought or in deed. The Bible inculcates the equitable principle, that we must do unto others as we would wish others to do unto us; they teach that Catholics are to be excluded from the operation of this Gospel rule. "May the Lord fill you with hatred against the Pope", this was the legacy of Luther which his followers have inherited. This legacy is still cherished by some who preeminently should be teachers of truth and veracity. But there is one consolation which is ours, that the Catholic Church will live to bury her present day unmerciful unmaskers of "Popery" even her MacKenzies just as she has buried her assassins of the past. Luther said "during my lifetime I have been a pest to you Pope and after my death I shall be thy death" and Luther is gone and the church continues gloriously to exist. The words of St. Augustin have always remained true. "The enemies of the Church look at her and cry out, she is dying. While uttering those words they die and are brought to the grave and the Church continues to exist and preaches the power of God to the centuries." The whole present day situation is most correctly illustrated by a picture which I have seen in my travels. On the canvas was represented St. Peter's church with its magnificent dome. Attached to the cross which surmounts the grand dome of Michel Angelo was a rope and pulling at the rope in an effort to tear down the great Basilica were Julian the Apostate, Luther, Voltaire, Bismarck etc. and in my imagination I see at the end of the rope Mr. MacKenzie of the Presbyterian Church in Tillamook. They have all tumbled in the dust and in the attempt of tearing down the noble edifice had suffered broken legs and arms. Behind them all stood the devil, all in smiles saying "Well boys you had better quit that; I have been doing what you do for the last 1800 years and I have not succeeded yet."

Yours truly,
Francis Van Clarenbeck.
